FARM, HOMESTEAD AND PLOT

The Use of Fertilisers : Importance of Nitrogen : Balanced Manure for Beet : Money in Pigs : Some Useful Ratio s : Grass, Green Food and Silos : Breeding Better Horses : The Garden Guide : What, When and How to Plant

By RUSTICUS.

A GOOD beet crop is about as easy to obtain as a good crop of mangolds, but there are slight differences in treatment, which make considerable difference in the yield both of root and sugar content. Beet is not such a gross feeder as mangolds, and excessive applications of manure prevent rather than encourage a full crop, but balanced manuring, on the other hand, is clearly an advantage. Conditions are so different in various areas that it is impossible to lay down a standard treatment that will give the best results everywhere, but there are a few principles which are of general application. The first principle is that the crop needs a complete manure — nitrogen, phosphates and potash. We know that nitrogen promotes the growth of the beet tops, and, under normal conditions, this makes for a healthy, and, consequently, a heavy crop of roots; and, in addition, the tops themselves are a valuable article of food, so that the hope of a good beet crop without nitrogen will not be fulfilled. On the other hand, very heavy dressings of nitrogen may reduce the sugar content of the roots. Nitrogen used alone as a fertiliser has not such a great effect as might be expected, though a couple of years ago it gave rather remarkable results in a wet season. Nitrogen, used with superphosphate and potash, however, will always have a remarkably good effect on the yield.

USE MORE POTASH

Except where what is called the standard dressing is used, farmers are inclined to ignore potash, but on most land a good beet crop is impossible without it. On moderately light land, where beet can be grown well and easily lifted if the land is well treated, rather heavy dressings of potash will pay for themselves. Muriate of potash up to 3 cwt. an acre has given good results, but potash without nitrogen, or nitrogen without potash, will not be a successful dressing. Fortunately, both nitrogen and potash are plentiful this year, and the only shortage is a slight lack of phosphates. It is somewhat curious that in some years this fertiliser, used alone, seems to have no effect at all, except perhaps in an earlier development of the crop. By the way, no farmer should sow beet without the use of borax as a preventive of heart rot.

SAVE GREEN STUFF

With the new development in the war situation, there is every probability that the shortage of feeding stuffs will become more acute. For this reason every farmer should produce as much feeding stuffs as possible, and particularly green stuff, to replace the nitrogenous foods that we usually import. Marrow stem kale, sown next month, will give a good crop of useful food in the autumn, in addition to the customary root crops which will come in later. Grass should be husbanded as far as practical, and this can best be done by rotational grazing. Usually when cattle are let out on grass after the winter there is a good bite, but when the animals are allowed to graze it all day long they soil, trample, and lie on half of it. The best plan is to turn them in on the heavy grass for a total of about four hours in each twelve, letting them spend the remainder of the time on a bare pasture.

GET THAT SILO

On every farm a great quantity of first-class green stuff could be saved if a silo were used, and those who can manage it should buy or build one. Those of the Weatherwell type made locally are very suitable for the average farm, but we must get it out of our heads that making silage is a new venture, or one adapted only to times of difficulty. Farming of the future, as well as of the present, must take the necessary measures to make the preservation of green food a routine farm operation and provide the necessary equipment. We must also be prepared to grow crops for silage, setting about the matter as deliberately as we now set about growing mangolds and pitting them or growing corn and threshing it.

BETTER HORSES

In spite of our reputation for breeding excellent horses, the standard of farm horses is generally poor. In some counties there is a first-class type of light horse of the Irish draught type, and in others there are many good Clydesdales, but there are a lot of compromises between the two, and a lot of nondescripts which are useless for farm work. With the approach of the breeding season we should take steps to remedy this. Good farm horses are likely to be dear for years to come, and in actual work a good horse is far more economical than a bad one. Good type mares cost no more to keep than weeds, and will work practically all the year round, even when breeding.

MORE MONEY IN PIGS

THE pig is our greatest machine for turning raw material into meal. For three and a half pounds of food it will put on one pound of live weight increase, and because of its efficiency in this respect it demands that the food must be perfectly attuned to its requirements. During the growing period it must have proteins to build up the body and keep it fit to lay on weight, and these proteins must be of animal origin. Thus pigs fed on barley, oats, wheat products or maize, which are the chief pig feeds, must also get fish meal, meat meal or milk, and no matter what combination of grain foods is used the animal proteins must be included. Skim milk, separated milk, or buttermilk are all satisfactory, and in American and European experiments have given as good results as meal or fish meal.

The major troubles to which pigs are subject are swine fever and swine erysipelas, of which there are sporadic outbreaks from time to time; infestation with worms, which is quite common; deficiency diseases like rickets and scouring, and such other complaints as are mainly due to unsuitable food and unsuitable housing.

Worm infestation can be easily controlled, and moderate care in housing, feeding, and exercise reduces the other troubles to a minimum.

Meals should not be cooked for pigs, as the cooking reduces the value of the food, and, in addition, when food is cooked the pig is very often compelled to take big quantities of liquid that it does not need before it can get the food. Dry meals, with an adequate supply of clean water at will, is the most efficient, as well as the cheapest, method of fattening pigs on the average farm. When potatoes are fed they are better cooked. Roots are not worth the trouble of feeding to pigs.

A New Athletic Club?

Dublin University is, I hear, organising a new athletic club, on the same lines as the famous Atlanta Club across the Channel.

The new club will be open to past athletes of any university or college, and it is expected that their forces will be quite strong enough to engage provincial and other selections. These will be a welcome addition to the season's list of fixtures, which, thanks to the "split" in Irish athletics, has plenty of room for further attractive meetings.

It will be remembered that a couple of years ago Trinity severed their connection with the N.A.C.A., because that body doggedly flouted the ruling of the International Body to confine their activities to the twenty-six counties. In doing so, the N.A.C.A. cut themselves from the seas of all outside competition—more adrift indeed, than any other sporting body in Ireland; for even the G.A.A., with its purely domestic policy, has an outlet in London and America.

So long as they remained affiliated with the N.A.C.A., Trinity were debarred from competing against Queen's University and the cross-Channel universities, so they, very naturally, quit and joined the A.A.U.E., an integral part of whose policy is international competition.

"National's" Attitude

At Trinity's special meeting to sever with the N.A.C.A. there was only one dissentient—Judge Meredith, a former Irish champion sprinter—but even he was not against the step in that he merely suggested that the meeting should postpone their decision in the hope that the "split" would be settled—a forlorn hope as things are at present.

I am told, by the way, that University College, Dublin, may follow Trinity's lead and join up with the A.A.U.E. this season.

The step was considered before, though nothing happened; but my sporting scout—who, I must say, has an exceptionally strong nose for news—tells me that a recent change in "'National" may bring matters to a head.

The majority of the athletes are in favour of a resumption of outside competitions, especially the annual battle with Trinity; but some of the "Brass Hats" at Earlsfort terrace, apparently, consider more strongly the interests of the university as a whole, and not the interests of the athletic club.

More than Coronets

We have our good qualities after all. Witness this letter, which I print exactly as it comes to me from a Central European refugee in Dublin:—

"I would be very thankful if you could tell your readers (in a better English than mine!) something about the Irish women's kindness.

"I discovered Sunday night using the tram 18 that I have dropped my bag with money and keys etc. Of course I was shocked, not only because I had no money for the tram, but also because I did not know how to come in the house.

"It was wonderful to see how everybody in the tram tried to help me. Before I could notice it one lady had paid the fare. Without being asked she offered and gave me money for the phone. Another lady left the tram with me, did not like to leave me alone and tried to help despite the late night-hour.

"I was travelling a lot and know many big towns, but I am sure, in such a case I would be lost in Berlin, Paris, Rome and everywhere. Only these lovely Irish people can be so kind. What a relief for a refugee to be in such a country!

"P.S. I am sure you will not bring my name and address. Many thanks!"

Stealing a Steamroller!

A recent report from Germany—in Field-Marshal Goering's own paper—laments the growing number of thefts, and declares that nothing is safe now. It appears that the municipal steamroller at Solingen—the German Sheffield—weighing seven hundredweight, has been stolen under cover of darkness.

During the period when the mark crashed, a similar wave of thefts swept over Germany. Not far from Solingen I was shown a great railway bridge, spanning a mountain gorge, one of the engineering marvels of the world. Right in the centre, at the most dangerous point, someone had climbed over the side of this bridge, and had removed a brass and copper scroll at the risk of his life.

At the municipal baths I was asked to leave a fantastic number of marks as a deposit before they would let me have a towel. The reason given was that so many towels had been stolen that it was necessary to take counter measures. But even in their most desperate need I did not hear of anyone stealing the steam-roller before.

A Record?

The promotion to Lieutenant-Colonel of Major P. N. Holden must, I think, constitute a record number of colonels in one family, writes Mrs. J. W. Pemberton, of Terenure.

The late Captain Charles Holden, of this city, served for 39 years in the Leinster Regiment. His five sons all served through the Great War.

Lieutenant-Colonel C. Holden, D.S.O., C.M.G., who also served in the Boer War, died in 1939, after many years illness resulting from war service.

Lieutenant-Colonel E. Holden is stationed at Rangoon, and Lieutenant-Colonel P. N. Holden has just received his promotion on active service—thus making three colonels in one family.

Lieutenant-Colonels E. Holden and P. N. Holden were educated at St. Andrew's College, Dublin. I am the only member of the family living in Dublin now, Mrs. Pemberton concludes.

A Sign

Americans are professing to see a sign that is the herald of a new occupant of the White House this year.

While the States are still wondering whether President Roosevelt will break all records and run for the Presidency for a third time, a "sign" which, in the opinion of many people, means that a Republican will occupy the White House has been given by the telephone people. The telephone number of Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, who is a Republican Presidential candidate, has been changed to "ME. 1940."

The Senator only got the number about a couple of months ago, and, while the full title of the exchange to which his telephone line is connected is "Metropolitan," only the first two letters of the word are dialled.

This may be a sign, but, on the other hand, a good press agent might have arranged for this change on the Senatorial telephone line—I wonder!

IRISH RED CROSS SOCIETY

CHAIRMAN'S REVIEW OF ITS WORK

MEMBERSHIP ALREADY 3,000

THE half-yearly meeting of the Central Council of the Irish Red Cross was held recently at the offices of the Society, 20 Merrion square, Dublin.

The Chairman, in his address dealing with the work done by the Society since the first meeting of the Council, held in September, 1939, said that county branches were now established in the following counties: Louth, Meath, Westmeath, Dublin, Kildare, Leix, Offaly, Wexford, Waterford, Tipperary (South Riding), Clare, Kerry, Cork, Cavan, Donegal, Galway, Leitrim, Sligo and Mayo.

All maritime counties, with the exception of Limerick and Wicklow, have now committees functioning within their various territories, and active steps have already been taken to add the remaining counties to the list of organised county branches within a very short time.

Well-attended first aid classes are being held all over the country.

HOSPITALS' SUPPLIES DEPOT

In many parts of the country groups of ladies, under the direction of the Emergency Hospitals' Supplies Dépôt, 7 Cavendish row, Dublin, and the committees of the county branches, are busy knitting woollen goods, such as pullovers, jumpers, socks, etc., to provide for shipwrecked sailors and others landed on our shores. It is intended that each county (particularly maritime counties) will eventually have its own supply dépôt to provide for contingencies. The central dépôt, which has now a large staff of voluntary workers, undertakes the purchase of wool, shirting, pyjama material and bandage material, which it distributes to approved centres to be made up into the finished product for eventual return to Dublin, or for use of the depôts throughout the country.

The outstanding event from the financial point of view was the successful promotion of the Irish Red Cross Sweepstake. The total amount received by the Society on behalf of the various Red Cross Societies was £61,401 8s. 4d., and of this sum the Irish Red Cross secured £27,250 12s. A considerable portion of the moneys for the various national Societies has already been sent away.

The Society has invested a sum of £20,000 in long term Irish gilt-edged securities.

A Medical Sub-Committee has drawn up a syllabus and rules governing examinations in First Aid, for which the approval of the Local Government and Public Health Department has been obtained. Certificates will be issued to successful candidates. A First Aid Manual is in course of preparation.

THE GRANTS

Financial assistance has been afforded by the Society as follows:—

(1) Finnish Red Cross	£2,000
(2) Hungarian Red Cross (on behalf of Polish Refugees in that country)	500
(3) Turkish Red Crescent	500
(4) St. Vincent de Paul Society, Dublin	500
(5) Bishop Fourquet, Canton, China, for War Charities Account	500

SHIPWRECKED CREWS

The Society was in a position to render valuable assistance to shipwrecked crews landed on our shores. The County Cork branch of the Society was called upon to help in no less than three cases—those of the s.s. Arlington Court, the s.s. Songa and the s.s. Togima. These three boats account for no less than 58 survivors landed at different parts of the Cork coast on varying dates between December, 1939, and February, 1940. The local branches provided all the necessaries required for the crews when landed, along with the local shipping agents, supplied the necessary comforts, got into direct touch with the owners or agents of the shipwrecked vessels, obtained the necessary transport to hospital where it was necessary, and supplied knitted goods. Further cases of shipwrecked crews were attended to in Kerry, Clare and Donegal, and in each case the local branch members, or, if a branch did not exist, the headquarters here, did everything possible for the crews and provided them with all the necessaries.

The local doctors who were members of the Red Cross Society attended to the wants of these sailors while in hospital. In the case of the Norwegian vessel, Steinstad, whose crew was landed in Donegal, the members of the Society in Dublin met the sailors on their homeward journey in Dublin and provided them with further comforts for their journey. The secretary of the Society went specially to Kerry from Dublin on two occasions to visit members of shipwrecked crews in Cahirciveen and Tralee, and he made the necessary arrangements, along with the local representatives of the Society and the agents of the shipowners, for the men's comfort.

MEMBERSHIP

The membership is now approximately 3,000, including some 150 life members. It is hoped that with the establishment of further county branches, with sub-branches within these counties, the membership will shortly reach the 5,000 mark.

Since the last meeting a secretary has been appointed, who took up duty on the 18th December. In addition to the work of the central office, he has been engaged in the organisation of the various county branches, and he has addressed meetings and started county branches in the following places: Leitrim, Waterford, Kildare, Clare, Offaly and Kerry.

The Chairman concluded by stating that as the Society did not commence its activities until September, 1939, he thought it would be conceded that lengthy strides had been made towards putting it on a firm basis.

CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL

All the rest of the Cathedral will be open to the public. Clergy are cordially invited to come to the Service; they should be in the Chapter Robing Room not later than 3 o'clock. The companies of the Guides will put on their uniform in the schools opposite the Cathedral entrance. The Service will last one hour.

GATE THEATRE

At the Gate Theatre, George Bernard Shaw's "The Devil's Disciple" will continue its successful run for a second week from next Tuesday. Described as a "humorous melodrama," the play combines pungent Shavian wit, with an exciting plot, and provides an excellent evening's entertainment.

WIRELESS COLLEGE SUCCESSES

In recent examinations held under the British Postmaster-General's Department the passes for the Government's wireless certificates by students attending the Caledonian Wireless College, which is affiliated to the Belfast Wireless College, North street Arcade, has shown the usual high standard in results attained.

In the Glasgow College 90 per cent. of the students passed through for certificates, while in Edinburgh the percentage was 93.

Among those sitting the examination and securing certificates were William Sutherland, Edinburgh, and James Simpson, Glasgow. As an example of the value of the Government certificate received, Mr. Sutherland sat his examination on Tuesday, signed on a ship Wednesday, and sailed Thursday.

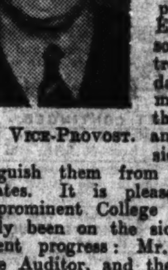
TRINITY COLLEGE NOTES

THE DOWNE'S PRIZE EXAMINATION

THE PASSING OF TWO BRILLIANT GRADUATES

By Our Correspondent.

MEDICAL Lecture Term began on Wednesday, and, as a result, the quiet of vacation has been replaced in College by movement and life. The bright weather of the last few days provided a suitable introduction to the glories of Trinity Term, and many spent lazy afternoons sunning themselves on the steps in front of the Dining Hall, one of this term's most pleasant features. Even candidates for scholarships, whose troubles start in ten days' time, look moderately cheerful, though usually a pale and haggard expression makes it easy to distinguish them from their fellow-undergraduates. It is pleasant to know that two prominent College figures, who have recently been on the sick list, are making excellent progress: Mr. John Fraser, the College Auditor, and the Vice-Provost, Dr. Goligher, to whose devotion and untiring service Trinity owes so much.

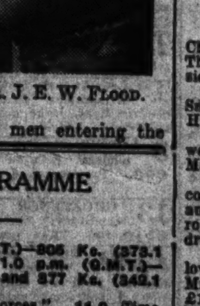


The Vice-Provost.

This week, however, Trinity also lost two brilliant graduates. W. R. Scott, the economic historian and Fellow of the Royal British Academy, who died a few days ago in England. He entered College in 1885 and secured the First Senior Moderatorship in Philosophy in 1889. He was also a sometime Wray Prizeman, and in 1932 he received an honorary LL.D. from Dublin University. His first appointment was in St. Andrews, where he studied and taught philosophy. He passed from his first subject to economics. He became an authority on the subject. Among his most important works is a study of the life and thought of Adam Smith, whose career ran on strangely parallel lines to his own. For about twenty years he held a chair founded in memory of Adam Smith in the University of Glasgow. He played a most important part in organising the present-day industrial and financial life of Scotland. He served on numerous Government commissions and committees. His death will cause a great gap in the ranks of economic historians.

MR. J. E. W. FLOOD

Mr. J. E. W. Flood, whose death was announced last Thursday, was another graduate who had a career of distinguished public service. He started in College with a Kidd Scholarship, secured the First Senior Moderatorship in modern Literature and the Second Moderatorship in Classics, the Henry Hutchinson Literary Scholarship, the Littledale Prize and the Berkeley Medal. For some years he was an Assistant Secretary at the Colonial Office, and, when he died, Third Crown Agent for the Colonies. He always took a keen and kindly interest in Trinity men entering the Service. An ardent Rugby player, he never ceased to watch with solicitude the fortunes of the Rugby Club.



Mr. J. E. W. Flood.

Among the news from the Medical School is that of Mr. R. F. J. Henry's departure to serve in England. He was Lecturer in Applied Anatomy and was President of the D.U. Biological Association last year. Another item of news is that Junior Clinics—which are lectures held in hospital—will be given this term instead of Michaelmas Term.

THE DOWNE'S PRIZE

Notice has been given that the examination for the Downe's Prize for extempore speaking will be held on May 17th. The examiners are the Archbishop King's Professor (the Rev. Mr. Hartford), the Regius Professor of Divinity (the Rev. Dr. Oulton) and the Professor of Oratory (Dr. Moody). This is apparently the only occasion on which Dr. Moody, qua Professor of Oratory, performs any duties in the University.

To all those who like not only the buildings of College, but also its every-day life, the news that Mr. J. E. F. Quinn, a keen cinematographist, is taking a 9.5 mm. documentary film of College life will come as a pleasant surprise. Parts of the film are ready, and we believe that shots of some of the best-known College sites and characters have been taken.

Mr. John Fraser.

The Squash Club has distinguished itself recently. It first rose to the top of Section "B" of the City of Dublin Squash Rackets' Association; then defeated the University Club's team, and won the League competition. Messrs. J. E. F. Quinn, T. P. Harvey and P. H. Garwith, all members of the team, have been awarded colours. The Hockey Club played Corinthians on Wednesday last and drew their match. They now still need two points to be placed first in the League. They have, however, only one match to play — against Railway Union.

RELIEF OF DISTRESSED PROTESTANTS

An appeal for increased subscriptions to the Coal Fund was made at the annual general meeting of the Association for the Relief of Distressed Protestants, held on Wednesday last in the boardroom, 45 Molesworth street, Dublin, Mr. Weber Smyth in the chair. Also present were: The Rev. W. J. Mayne, M.A.; Mr. J. Wheatley, Mr. J. Mulreed, Mr. W. B. Butler, Mr. J. Hourie and Mr. Percy C. Scott, secretary.

The audited statements of accounts for the year 1939 were received and approved. The accounts disclosed that the Association had expended a sum of £1,109 15s. 4d. in grants to distressed Protestants, being an increase of almost £200 over that for the previous year. Payments to jubilee annuitants amounted to £237 3s. 3d. Free coal distributed to the poor in parishes in Dublin cost the Association a sum of £977 11s. 6d.

NATIONAL CHILDREN'S HOSPITAL, HARCOURT STREET, DUBLIN.

The Committee of Management of the National Children's Hospital held their monthly meeting on Thursday, 11th April, S. H. Guilford, Esq., presiding.

Also present—Dr. W. H. Hart, Dr. Trevor N. Smith, Professor T. G. Moorhead, Dr. Myles Keogh, H. D. Pack-Beresford, Esq.

Apologies for non-attendance at the meeting were received from the Viscount Powerscourt, C. J. Macdougald, Esq.; Mrs. Maud Walsh.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read, confirmed and signed, and those of the House and Finance Committee approved. The usual routine business was transacted, and cheques were drawn in favour of the March accounts.

The committee gratefully acknowledges the following contributions:—The Earl of Iveagh, £5; Mr. P. Macken, £3 3/-; Mrs. Wilson-Wright, £1 1/-; Mrs. F. R. Armitage, £2 2/-; Miss N. E. Brown, £2.

The Matron gratefully acknowledges the following gifts:—C. J. Fallon, Ltd., copies of the Irish Digest; Mrs. J. L. S. Jeffares, box of daffodils; Mrs. McVeagh, daffodils; J. Beggs, Esq., basket of Easter eggs and eating eggs; — Crawford, Esq., gramophone and books.

During the month of March there were 1,656 out-patients, including sun lamp treatment, minor operations and dressings.

A limited number of paying beds is now available at a fee of three guineas per week.

The hospital is non-political and non-sectarian.

O'Casey's Star

In Decline

The Star Turns Red. A Play, by Sean O'Casey. London: Macmillan. 7/6 net.

MR. SEAN O'CASEY is still troubled about the stars. "What is the stars, Joxer; what is the stars?" That gorgeous question of Captain Boyle to Joxer Daly in "Juno and the Paycock" remains unanswered by any larger flight of their creator's imagination, and O'Casey looks only a little more lost now in an alien firmament. His once bright, particular star has for the moment turned red. Is this a sign merely that it is going to flicker out as a cinder and be no more seen; or does it mean that a wholly new dramatist, this time one as large as a planet, is about to swim into our ken? One searches this play for an answer, only to be driven by it to the thought that in "The Plough and the Stars" (the sky was always his only limit!) O'Casey's star saw the last moment of its proper brightness.

He had a small gift which, because it was complete and perfect in itself, had the misfortune to look larger than it really was. It deceived many into making the most fantastic exaggerations of its size, and even the sacred name of Shakespeare was used to lift it higher than it could possibly go. The game became a cruel joke in the end, particularly in the hands of "critics," here and there, who began to behave about it like "butties of Joxer's" engaged in pulling the leg of Captain Boyle.

The New Irishman

The joke has nearly played itself out, but O'Casey remains its victim. It has left him, so long did he find pleasure in listening to it, almost without that fine sense of humour which gave us in quick succession "The Gunman," "Juno" and "The Plough." It did not matter that he believed these plays to be tragedies, or so described them, for his own amusement, perhaps. They were loved for the fresh fun they made in the theatre, and for their vivid versions of already familiar "characters."

They were about three moments in our own serio-comic warfare, civil and uncivil, and we liked them because they said things about these doings which, all the time we had been enduring them, we wanted so fiercely to say ourselves, but just couldn't, for we were afraid. The London audience liked them, too, for they seemed to project the new Irishman in something that looked very like the old light. If this was the long-lost stage Irishman back to them again, they were jolly glad. They had never been able to fathom the abysmal reason why the Abbey Theatre had tried so hard to transform him into a serious, normal sort of blighter.

So far, so good; but, then, Mr. O'Casey, blown sky-high above his audience in both places, began to write "great" plays. The first of these was "The Silver Tassie," which the Abbey Theatre at first refused—in Mr. O'Casey's artistic interest solely. The later history of that play is linked closely with the decline of his star.

Second Movement

It was a play which publicity rapidly made too "great" for any theatre, and thereafter it became his mission to write plays that were "greater" than any theatrical manager would ever be able to realise this side of the tomb—"Within the Gates," and, now, "The Star Turns Red." These can be quite correctly described as real tragedies—for Mr. O'Casey, and the most deplorable thing about them is the suppression of his true quality which they laboriously effect. Yet one can feel an almost pathetic attempt on the part of the real O'Casey to break back to life through heavy layers of what he would himself have described in his shining days as "pure codology" in the latest of the two.

He calls it ideology now, and it is Red, Red, and very "derogatory." Oh, for a moment of Captain Boyle and Joxer, or Seumas Sheils, or Fluther Good about O'Casey now! They were his creations, and he gave them such vivid life that they seem somehow entitled to have a say on the subject. The verdict of the first-named would be, inevitably: "He's in a state o' chassis, Joxer, a state o' chassis!"

Still, although we do not hear them in this play, some echo of their rich appeal keeps sounding through its dull debate on the ultimate worth to earth of Communism as against Fascism, and vice versa.

Melodrama

"The Star Turns Red" begins the last hours of a Christmas Eve in the home of an aged couple, who become the chorus of the play. Through the windows can be seen the silhouette of a towering church spire, and to the left of it a large shining star. We see a family torn by the opposing ideologies, the two sons on opposite sides and a girl between them. Already there is fighting in the street. The debate becomes a melodrama, complete with shooting. A dying Communist, the father of the girl, speaks his last words:—

"Now, my arm," he whispers to his Communist son, "raise it, lift it high! Lift it up, lift it up, in the face of these murdering bastards—the clenched fist!"

The debate is transferred to the headquarters of the General Workers' Union, and goes back again to the house where the dead body lies. There are tragic figures in the room—a young man with a cough, a young woman with a withered baby in her arms, a hunchback. Priests enter, and one of them is given this fantastic speech to deliver:—

"Let the fair greeting given to Communism by virtuous men be the greeting of ball and bayonet, that we may sit safe and high over this cosy scum of the world's wickedness; that we may be delivered from these racketeers of the souls of the faithful; that we may be free from these restless red rats who seize a high holy day for the loudest slaughter and the richest rape!"

Almost in Dublin

Red Jim, the leader of the workers, comes in. "Strike up the drums," he yells to the mob outside, "take up your dead comrade and strike up the drums!" The mob echoes his shout and begins to sing: "Aha, Red Star, arise the wide world over!"

The last act passes in the Mansion House, and for a few lighter moments we are almost in Dublin, with the old O'Casey nearly back to us again. But "great" plays cannot afford to be too funny. There are wild sounds in the streets. Hell has broken loose. The soldiers have joined the workers. The Fascisti have surrendered. The Red Guard enters and takes over. Still, the worst has yet to happen. It is indicated as happening in the final stage direction. The star that was shown as of shining silver in the heavens at the beginning of the play has turned red. It glows and seems to grow bigger as the curtain falls.

Ah, yes, a Red play, indeed, with nothing really of O'Casey to remember from it at all but what Captain Boyle might say with truth about it to Joxer:

"Where is O'Casey now, Joxer, where is Sean?"

Queens at Home

The Private Lives of Victoria and Alexandra

The Private Life of Queen Alexandra: As Viewed by her Friends. By Hans Roger Madol. 24 Illustrations. London: Hutchinson. 18/- net.

The Making of a Queen: Victoria at Kensington Palace. By Eleanor Graham. London: Jonathan Cape. 8/6 net.

THERE is always an embarassing interval after the death of Royal personages before fact—or authenticated hearsay—can crystalise into history. Miss Graham has more scope than Mr. Madol, both for candour and for imaginativeness. She is at the necessary safe distance from the events. A reviewer has an easier task with her work than with Mr. Madol's, whose revelations and whose discretion are given the stamp of officialdom by his friend, Prince Valdemar of Denmark—Queen Alexandra's youngest brother, who died only last year.

Alexandra learned her "graciousness" in a hard school. Irish people saw it in 1904. In the spring of that year, during what seemed on the surface a triumphal procession through Waterford and part of Tipperary, King Edward became short-tempered when the car in which he was being driven failed at the first attempt to negotiate that hairpin bend in the Knockmealdown, known then—and now—as the Vee. (Perhaps he thought that a crowd of well-wishers, gathered at this dangerous spot, had some less cordial intention than to cheer.) But Alexandra, in another car, had smiles for everyone. Three miles further on she stopped to accept courtesies and flowers at Clogheen.

An Irish Visit

Her beauty, to those who saw her on that occasion, is no legend. But we believe it to have been a grave psychological error that Ireland never saw royalty in full regalia; for "motor cars" were a short-lived novelty, Sir William Goff, of Waterford, having already owned the first of them in that district. A novelty, too, was a queen, absurdly young-looking and all that a queen should be in the popular imagination, except that she wore a purple velvet toque instead of a crown!

This brings us to the point upon which we can be more frank than Mr. Madol. Queen Alexandra was lovely, she was charming—but, in spite of all he says, she was not a "clever" woman. He believes that the failure to appreciate her wit and perspicacity came from deafness. This we question. But she was amiable, with a difficult mother-in-law; she was charitable—in the widest sense—as is testified by a generous act of hers when King Edward was dying. She was, to the mind of her day, what a film star might be to the mind of our own time—a lovely abstraction, but with reverence abetting the desire to imitate her. On the whole, imitation of Alexandra was calculated to give women's minds a healthier turn than imitation of Victoria, even when it became a little silly.

The Persian Way

There is a good deal of history in this book, which does not overlook the significance of King Edward's desire for a strong France—unlike his mother, who desired a strong Prussia. There are three good "stories." The best (concerning the uncertainty of an equerry's idiomatic French) cannot unfortunately be reproduced here. But here is another, very tactfully worded:—

"At Court the Shah (of Persia) was under a slight misapprehension as to the position of some of the elderly ladies-in-waiting, and said to the Prince of Wales: 'These are your (sic) wifes? They are old and ugly. Have them beheaded and take new and pretty ones.'"

This is the biography to appeal to an older generation rather than to the present school of fact-for-fact's sake. But with Miss Graham, who deals with the story of Alexandra's mother-in-law up to the age of eighteen, we are in a different atmosphere. She has a delightful style, even if at times she falls between the two stools of imaginative reconstruction and historical sobriety.

When Victoria was born it was only natural that she should become the centre of cabals and counter-plots. She had a mad grandfather living, and six uncles on the Guelph side—the Regent, the Dukes of York, Clarence, Cumberland, Sussex and Cambridge. To her mother's brother, Leopold of Saxe-Coburg (widower of Princess Charlotte), potential King of Greece, finally King of the Belgians, she owed a great deal.

Victoire Duchess of Kent had her own plans for her daughter's valuable future: Captain Conroy (formerly the Duke of Kent's secretary) had the favour of his widow, and the plans of this pair developed towards a Regency, with the Duchess as Regent, a subservient Victoria as Queen, and pickings for the favourite. Indeed, it is as if a malevolent influence willed to death the daughters of Clarence and the charming Adelaide of Saxe-Meiningen, who could write to Victoria's difficult mother:—

"My children are dead, but yours lives, and she is mine, too."

Royal Uncles

That Victoria managed to evolve into a determined and well-balanced young woman was largely due to Uncle Leopold, who discouraged the anti-Windsor diatribes of Kensington Palace. The following passage illustrates Miss Graham's agreeable style:—

"She saw all her uncles simply in relation to herself. Uncle King was charming and powerful. Uncle William was kind and friendly, like an old sheep dog. Uncle Cumberland was sinister, and made her flesh creep. Uncle Sussex was cross and tiresome, but not alarming, while Uncle Cambridge held a singular place as a slightly odd but affectionate uncle."

Uncle York—a dying debauchee—had in the most charming manner entertained her with a Punch-and-Judy show. Not thus would she have envisaged the Guelphs had the Duchess of Kent had her way! The delayed death of William IV. (formerly Clarence) prevented a maternal regency—and Victoria, with wise advisers of the oppostie sex, showed no morbid turn until the death of the Prince Consort.

But in the "Mamma knows best" of Victoire Duchess of Kent and her matriarchal bullyings, Miss Graham makes us perceive the seeds of trouble for Victoria's own children, and not least for Queen Alexandra.

Scott of the Antarctic

The Evolution of a Hero

Scott of the Antarctic. By George Seaver. London: John Murray. 10/6 net.

ROBERT FALCON SCOTT, treated as Mr. Seaver treats him, is psychologically interesting and an inspiring man. No born hero he, but a weak and backward youth, who yet possessed that quality of mind, or soul, which enabled him to shape his own career, and even to mould mind and body so as best to accomplish the ends towards which his whole life was directed. As a biographer writes: "His was one of the cases in which mind, and even body, are formed by a continuous and deliberate exercise of will." In youth "shy and diffident, small and weakly for his age, lethargic, backward, and, above all, dreamy," he overcame all, and to-day stands forth pre-eminently as the highest type among the leaders of men.

Apart from his own personal efforts, it was the navy which helped him most on his career. It provided "a salutary corrective to certain more obvious defects which were inherited—a disposition to indolence, untidiness; strong, emotional outbursts of vexation." His energies were harnessed and directed.

The Growth of Personality

But it was a lengthy and a painful process this growth of a new personality. As he wrote in his private diary: "It is only given to us, cold, slowly-wrought natures, to feel the dreary, deadly tightening of the heart, this slow sickness which holds one for weeks. How can I bear it? I write of the future, of the hopes of being more worthy. But shall I ever be? Can I alone, poor weak wretch that I am, bear up against it all. The daily round, the petty annoyance, the ill-health, the sickness of heart."

Last Journey

When he deals with the almost unbearable pains and trials of that last journey, Mr. Seaver excels. He shows the full-fledged Scott, and shows him worthily among a band of heroes, to whom full honour also is given. His style is simple, and he lets grim fact and extract from log and diary tell the tale unadorned where possible. He is like a composer who uses some beautiful melody, letting it move by itself, unhampered by orchestration or frills.

Mr. Seaver says in conclusion: "He had lost what he set out for (Amundsen had forestalled him by a few short days), what he strove so hard to win for his country—priority at the Pole. But he had found something infinitely better worth finding. He had found himself. He had dramatised in his own experience, yet all unconsciously, the last act in the universal pilgrimage; had vindicated once again the supremacy of spirit over all that is mortal; had shown past all question that the race is not to the swift nor the battle to the strong, but that the race is to those who ran hard, even when they were crippled; that the battle is to those who fought and failed, but who endured to the end."

Clergy and Parishes of Ardfert and Aghadoe

An Invaluable Record

Ardfert and Aghadoe Clergy and Parishes. By Rev. James B. Leslie, M.A., D.Litt., M.R.I.A. Dublin: Church of Ireland Printing and Publishing Co. 20/- net (from the author).

THERE is no clergyman of the Church of Ireland of this generation whose name will live longer than that of Chancellor Leslie. It is impossible to over-estimate the magnitude of his contribution to the history of the Church and clergy, and it was especially fortunate that Dr. Leslie had made such extensive notes in the Public Record Office before the destruction of so many records during the civil war. This is the seventh of the Irish dioceses to which Dr. Leslie has turned his attention, and it must, indeed, have been a labour of love; for the united dioceses concerned cover in large part the County of Kerry, which is the author's native county.

Famous Names

Some of the Protestant families of the County of Kerry have made distinguished contributions to the history of Church and State. Names like those of Day, Herbert and Denny occur frequently, and it is good to see representatives of such an ancient Kerry family as the O'Sullivans in the Holy Orders of the Irish Church both before and after the Reformation. As in the other dioceses, many of the sons of the rectory distinguished themselves in other walks of life—one need only mention the distinguished General, Sir Eyre Coote, Commander-in-Chief in India when that empire was taken from the French. He was the son of a Vicar of Kilgarvan.

The Parishes

As an addition to the succession list of the clergy, Dr. Leslie has incorporated short notes on each of the various parishes, and in appendices he gives lists of extant Church plate and parish records, together with those places scheduled as national monuments. As always, the work is the product of painstaking and laborious care and research, and will be invaluable to the local historian and genealogist.

An Irishman Who Loved Germany

Sir Evelyn Wrench on the Nazi State

I Loved Germany. By Sir Evelyn Wrench. London: Michael Joseph. 12/6 net.

SIR EVELYN WRENCH is an Irishman, a former editor of The Spectator, and he once belonged to that group of persons with varying degrees of sympathy that was loosely termed "pro-German." He first visited Germany when he was a boy of twelve years, and he made a number of subsequent visits, the last on the eve of the present war. As the title of his book indicates, he loved Germany, and tried to appreciate the point of view of that country's politicians and statesmen. He explains the success of National Socialism, and no broad-minded reader of his book will fail to be impressed with the reasons that he gives. The campaign against the Jews, however, depressed him till he was assured that it was to be discontinued.

He is no longer a friend of Germany, but he is not an anti-German, and he preaches against a vindictive peace.

Exaggerated Nationalism

"The Germans, if they will but turn their backs on their exaggerated nationalism, have a great and essential contribution to make to the new Europe," he writes. The "if" is the trouble.

There is a lot in his book that should be informative to the British people—that Sweden and Denmark are not satisfied about Britain's disinterestedness in the war, for example. Some of his best chapters are about Russia. The Soviet system seemed to him to be the negation of everything that makes life worth living.

The thinking Englishman may feel when he reads this book that Nazi Germany has achieved things that democratic Britain failed to attempt with real determination. Speaking of the slums of Britain, a Dane said to Sir Evelyn Wrench: "We cannot help feeling that if you had a Hitler he would never tolerate the conditions which you Englishmen seem to accept as a matter of course."

Democracy can be another name for laisses-faire; and laisses-faire is not quite good enough to-day.

Gustav Streseman

Last Diaries, Letters and Papers

Gustav Stresemann: His Diaries, Letters and Papers: Vol. III. Edited and translated by Eric Sutton. London: Macmillan. 25/- net.

THIS is the third and final volume of the collected papers of the great German statesman and patriot. It shows him in periods of increasing weakness and failing bodily health, yet slowly gaining the ends he had in view—evacuation of the Rhineland, increased German participation at the League of Nations, downward revision of reparations payments. That he was German in every fibre of his being there can be no doubt. His was no easy international cosmopolitan: he was very conscious of his German blood. And yet he pursued in the face of many trials and buffetings a consistently pacific policy. Throughout these years Streseman could count on consistent help and support from Austen Chamberlain and from England; from Briand, but not from France. With the two statesmen he was generally in accord, but behind the scenes—at least, in France and Germany—there were other and less friendly influences.

Many of the general's problems encountered in these pages still trouble the world to-day—Japan's attitude to China, Russia, Mussolini's threats to Albania.

The interviews between Streseman and Briand provide, perhaps, the greatest interest of this volume; and Briand's hint, that it is not in the Parisian Press that one can read the mind of France, is worth passing on. The Press of the capital is venal, but not so the provincial papers—such as the Dépêche de Toulouse or the Petit Gironde.

This is a valuable collection for the student of international affairs, especially of the post-war period.

New Novels

The Swan of Usk. By Helen Ashton. London: Collins. 9/-.

"THE Swan of Usk" is the seventeenth century lyric poet, Henry Vaughan. Details about his life and personality have always been strangely lacking and, written in the form of a novel, this painstaking and agreeably written piece of historical research will go a long way towards filling the gap.

The poet was born in 1622 on the banks of the River Usk, a wild, mountainous region in the Welsh Marches. Son of a country squire, he took the King's side in the Civil War—much of the book is taken up with vivid descriptions of the excitements and customs of the period—and it was only after he had settled down years later as a country doctor that he began to write poetry. His work was little appreciated. The Cavaliers and Roundheads were too busy fighting each other, and the salacities of Congreve were more to the mood of the Restoration than the revelation

"I saw Eternity the other night,
Like a great Ring of pure and endless light,
As calm, as it was bright."

of a "gentle, very silent old man." He died, unrecognised, in 1695.

Tiger's Cub. By Graham Seton. London: Rich and Cowan. 8/3 net.

The author of this story of ambition is also known as Colonel Graham Seton Hutchison, D.S.O., M.C. Colonel Hutchison has served in India, and at one period of his career was in charge of an Indian military school, so perhaps we can take his marked sympathy with his main character, Sadhu Powar, as a statement of faith in the Indian commissioned officer.

Sadhu Powar is the son of a havildar, or sergeant, in a Mahratta regiment. His one desire is to follow in his father's footsteps. At school he is coached for the military college, and he passes through Sandhurst under the patronage of a general. He returns to his father's regiment bearing the King Emperor's commission, and sees service on the North-West Frontier.

The author's preoccupation with his characters at times leads him to neglect to make full use of his backgrounds. But, on the whole, "Tiger's Cub" is a good book, and Sadhu Powar, if he exists, an excellent reply to the "keep-the-damn'-niggers-in-their place" type of gentleman.

World's Strand. By Irene Grant. London: Hodder and Stoughton. 8/3 net.

"World's Strand" deals with the lives of Crystabel, Eleanor, John and Archie, the family stolid John Forrest and his wife, the gay Mirabelle, who drew so well, but cooked and sewed so badly. Unfortunately, Mirabelle and John (senior) die early. Thereafter the story centres particularly on Crystabel, who has been in love with Curtis Webster ever since she was twelve years old, and he had given her his largest "conker" (chestnut, to the fastidious). Curtis doesn't reciprocate at first and marries somebody else. However, the marriage ends tragically, and everything works out all right for Crystabel in the second last chapter. This is how it happens:—

"Gently but firmly he took her hands and kissed them before he folded them in his own.

"'Can it be true? Can you possibly mean that you love me?' he asked.

"'What else can I mean,' she answered proudly, drinking deep, for the time had come at last."

Mr. Polton Explains. By R. Austin Freeman. Hodder and Stoughton. 8/3 net.

There have been many "Dr. Thorndyke" novels, and there have been many thousands of Dr. Thorndyke "fans." "Polton" is more than a name to all of them. Polton is as unmistakable as Dr. Watson to an earlier generation; he is an individual—an individual who, when one comes to think of it, is as indispensable as the eminent doctor was to Sherlock Holmes, or anybody in detective fiction to anybody else. Polton, in a sentence, is the person who does the dirty work for Thorndyke.

In Mr. Austin Freeman's latest novel Mr. Polton explains exactly how he entered the service of Dr. Thorndyke. He also explains exactly—for something more than a third and something less than a half of the book—what he had been doing previously, and, incidentally, how he had obtained a certain piece of information which stood him in good stead for the unravelling of Dr. Thorndyke's latest mystery. Polton, in fact, rather than Thorndyke, is the hero of this book—not one of Mr. Freeman's best.

But You Are Young. By Josephine Lawrence. London: Jonathan Cape. 8/3 net.

The material in this latest novel of Miss Lawrence's is tragic. It is the story, not of a star-crossed dynasty, but of Kelsie Wright, a manicurist at Caledine's store, whose curse lies in the fact that her sixteen dollars a week, constitute almost the entire income of her family.

It is the modern tragedy, the tragedy of the machine age—unemployment. Manpower rotting unwillingly at home; the burden of breadwinner falling on the shoulders of young girls, apparently the only employable examples of that ill-named species, Homo Sapiens.

Kelsie wanted a husband and four children. She tried to shut her eyes to the fact that you cannot bring up a family of your own, and at the same time work to support a father and mother, a grandmother, two brothers, and a young sister who wants to be a teacher.

Miss Lawrence writes understandingly of people we all have met. We hope that her book will be accorded the good reception which it deserves.

He and His. By Reginald Carter. London: Jonathan Cape. 10/6 net.

This book is described in the dust jacket as a "most unusual novel," and the description is merited. It tells of a mid-19th century group of characters revolving round the squire, the archdeacon, with their aristocratic and middle-class families and friends, and it possesses something of the "atmosphere" of Trollope and Jane Austin. Its quality of the unusual, however, lies principally in the author's knack of capturing the style of the mid-Victorian novelist. It is not a story of 1850 written in 1940; rather is it a story of 1850 written as if in that very year. The action proceeds with a gentle absence of haste. The conversations of the characters do not end with the phrase that seems to tell all that was necessary for the evolution of the story, for the author lets us share the thoughts and exchanges of the talkers until the footman brings the tea on to the lawn, or a set of tennis is completed. The story is interesting, the characters lifelike, and there is a measure of wit in the telling of "He and His." But it is not a story for an hour's snappy reading. One must settle down to enjoy the book.

There Came Both Mist and Snow. By Michael Innes. London: Gollancz. 7/6 net.

Mr. Innes's latest is admirably "psychological," well constructed, baffling, delightfully written, and thoroughly dull. Mr. Innes, in short, has found a formula; and one may hope that he will forget about it. His previous novel, "Lament for a Maker," was a crime story of an unusual and excellent kind, full of mannerisms, and the better for them. "There Came Both Mist and Snow" contains the mannerisms, but little of the thrill.

NEWS SUMMARY

ABROAD

In a raid on German warships and bases along the Norwegian coast yesterday, the R.A.F. lost five 'planes, but shot down two German machines and damaged others. The Germans claim to have brought down eight British 'planes.—(Page 7.)

Many battles are reported to be in progress in Norway.—(Page 7.)

Rumania has suddenly suspended the loading of railway wagons for Germany. Simultaneously it was learned that the loading of oil barges on the Danube has been suspended for several days. Fear is expressed in Bucharest that this step will worsen German-Rumanian economic relations.—(Page 5.)

SPORTING

At Newbury yesterday, Tant Mieux won the Greenham Stakes.—(Page 10.)

FINANCIAL

With little support to offset offerings, prices were easily depressed in quiet markets on the London Stock Exchange yesterday, and the general trend was downward. Some Gold and Oil shares showed resistance. Losses were heaviest among British Rails.—(Page 12.)

Dublin Stock markets remained in a lifeless condition, price-changes being few and generally of small importance. The close was firm.—(Page 12.)

Days of Wrath

The great naval battle which began off the coast of Norway some days ago is being waged with unabated ferocity. Details, naturally, are lacking, in spite of a spate of wild rumours from Stockholm and elsewhere, but it is quite certain that Herr Hitler has sent what seems to be the greater part of the German Navy to challenge Great Britain's sea power, and the struggle that is in progress at the moment may decide not only the immediate course of the war, but the fate of European civilisation. In the British House of Commons on Thursday the First Lord of the Admiralty, in a brilliant speech, gave an interesting and fairly exhaustive survey of the naval situation. He made it fairly clear that Germany's invasion of Denmark and her occupation of important strategic points on the Norwegian coast had been prepared long before the British Government decided to lay minefields in Norway's territorial waters. The evidence which he was able to muster was convincing, and the speech has made a deep impression abroad—particularly in the United States. From the purely British point of view, however, it was not quite so satisfactory. From the beginning of the war citizens of the British Commonwealth have assumed that the Royal Navy had complete control of the seas. It was understood that German submarines and armed raiders might be able for a time to evade the vigilance of the British Fleet, but the fate of the Graf Spee and the rapid decrease in submarine activity indicated that British sea power was asserting itself, and that the immense superiority of the Anglo-French forces was beginning already to exert a decisive influence on the conduct of the war. Then came the Norwegian affair. On last Monday morning units of the Anglo-French fleets laid minefields at three points along the coast of Norway. By the following morning bodies of German troops had been landed as far North as Narvik, as well as at Bergen, Stavangar and other Norwegian ports. How did the German troopships contrive to reach Narvik under the protection of naval forces which were so strong that, when Captain Warburton Lee led his five destroyers into the Narvik fjord, one was sunk, another ran ashore and became a wreck, two others were damaged, and only one—H.M.S. Havoc—escaped unscathed? When, on Wednesday, a major battle developed at sea, the German battleship Scharnhorst was in action nearly a thousand miles north of its base. The weather, according to Mr. Winston Churchill, was "tempestuous," and the Scharnhorst managed to escape the attention of the British battle cruiser Renown, which almost certainly would have sent her to the bottom if the sea had been even reasonably calm; but the layman in Great Britain, not unnaturally, will be curious to know how not only the Scharnhorst, but a large number of other German warships, succeeded in running the gauntlet of the British Navy—and, in particular, in piercing the British minefields which had been laid only a few hours previously. Was there bungling somewhere? Was the British air reconnaissance at fault; or was a march stolen on the British Naval Intelligence Service, which, by common consent, is regarded as the best of its kind in the world?

All these points, doubtless, will be explained in due course, just as similar points were explained after the Battle of Jutland more than twenty years ago. There is no doubt that the British Navy has acquitted itself brilliantly since the fighting began off the coast of Norway. It has displayed fighting qualities of the highest order, and, while its losses have been not inconsiderable, its thrust into the minefields of the Skagerrak must be placed among the most daring feats of naval warfare. It is not easy at this stage to estimate with any degree of accuracy the effect of the present week's fighting on the outcome of the war; but, from the strategical point of view, it would appear as if the Germans have weakened their general position. They have added about a thousand miles of highly vulnerable coast-line to their front. They have failed to bend the Norwegian Government and people to their will, with the result that they must fight henceforward on two fronts—a condition of affairs which the German General Staff has been striving to avoid. Finally, they have given hostages to fortune as a result of their landings on the Norwegian mainland. Sooner or later, by virtue of their superior sea-power, the British will be able not only to land troops in Northern Norway, themselves, but also to prevent reinforcements and supplies from reaching the Germans. Unless the German Navy can inflict a crushing defeat on its powerful opponent—in which case, of course, the war will be virtually at an end—the Germans almost certainly will be bottled up in Norway, and will suffer even a worse fate than the British Expeditionary Force suffered at Gallipoli during the last war. Mr. Churchill has promised the House of Commons that all the German ships that venture through the Kattegat or Skagerrak will be sunk. If his boast is justified, Germany will be able to hold neither Norway nor Denmark, and a deadly blow will have been struck at her navy. Of course, there always is the possibility that the whole Norwegian-Danish adventure is merely a feint to distract Allied attention from a German offensive on the Western front, or even in South-Eastern Europe. Holland and Belgium, or Hungary and Rumania, may find themselves in German hands during the next few weeks, or even the next few days, and the main theatre of war may be transferred from the North Sea to the land. For the moment it seems that the Germans have regained the initiative. The world is agog with excitement, wondering what Herr Hitler will do next; for everybody realises that a decisive stage of the war is at hand, if, indeed, it has not arrived already. Dr. Goebbels has declared that Germany will be satisfied now with nothing less than a complete victory over the Allies. Mr. Churchill referred in his speech to Great Britain's "mortal enemy." The issue is joined between the two greatest Powers in the world at sea, on land, and in the air. It will be an appalling struggle, the end of which no human being can foresee.

Fruit and Vegetables

Replying to a question in Dáil Eireann this week, the Minister for Agriculture said that the report of the Fruit and Vegetables Tribunal had not yet been presented. Of this fact the fruit and vegetable vendors of the twenty-six counties are, no doubt, fully aware. However, it may interest the ordinary consumer—or would-be consumer—of fruit and vegetables to know that the tribunal, which has "not yet reported," was established rather more than five years ago. Its function—we quote from Mr. W. J. Flynn's "Irish Parliamentary Handbook"—was to "inquire into the conditions under which fruit and vegetables are marketed in this country, and certain relevant matters, and to report as to the steps, if any, which should be taken in relation thereto." The tribunal has not yet reported. It is easy to dismiss this lack of precipitancy with a patient shrug; what, after all, are commissions for except not to report, or, if they do report, to have their reports pigeon-holed? Nevertheless, this matter of fruit and vegetables affects every citizen in Ireland without exception, because every citizen eats, or wants to eat, fruit and vegetables. Not long ago we commented on the fact that the people of the belligerent United Kingdom could obtain new potatoes at 4d. a pound, while the citizens of neutral Dublin were compelled to pay 1s. 3d. As a luxury—even if a luxury of a very modest nature—new potatoes may not enter the purview of our economic experts; but those experts would be hard set to explain the excessive cost of many of the humbler products of the field in this city of ours. Heaven knows that cabbage is no prerogative of the rich; yet we venture to say that the cheapest cabbage in Dublin to-day costs more than the dearest cabbage in Belfast; and the same applies to other vegetables. How can these disparities be explained? The farmers complain that they obtain scandalously low prices for their produce; the retailers have a multitude of arguments to show why vegetables, for which the farmer receives, say, a shilling a dozen, cannot be sold across the counter for less than a shilling apiece. Something is wrong somewhere; either somebody is telling lies or all the parties concerned are victims of a ruinous system. It is not for us laymen to ascribe blame; that, very clearly, is the duty of the Fruit and Vegetables Tribunal, which, having been appointed in January, 1935, has not yet reported. The report, when, if ever, it is delivered, will command the interest of many thousands of Irish citizens. They will be happy to know why food costs more inside an agricultural country than outside it. They will be able to decide why cauliflowers and carrots and a dozen things of the kind are a luxury for the middle-class family and an impossibility for the poor, while the farmers lament that the growing of them is not worth while. It would be interesting, indeed, to learn why five years have not been a long enough time for the preparation of the tribunal's report. Perhaps it would throw too much light on certain weaknesses of the national system of economics, or on the national character.

Irish Films

The question of the Irish people's film fare has been receiving a good deal of publicity lately, and an increasing number of people is interested in debating the pros and cons of the matter. Hundreds of persons gave up their Saturday afternoons and travelled long distances to attend the discussions organised by the Irish Film Society, and at Mr. Jack O'Sheehan's lecture the other night, under the auspices of the National Agricultural and Industrial Development Association, the hall could not contain all who wanted to be present. At all these meetings great stress was laid by most of the speakers on the cultural and educational value of the film, if properly used, and the consensus of opinion was that neither of the adjectives could be applied to the average cinema programme. A remarkable feature of the proceedings was the sublime confidence of everybody in our ability to raise the film to a lofty, artistic and spiritual plane if only somebody gave us a chance. The question of making it a paying proposition was mentioned hardly at all, and then only in a half-apologetic fashion; there was general agreement that too much attention to the box-office had been the bane of film production in other countries, and the unspoken thought appeared to be in every mind that there, too, but for the grace of Heaven, went Irish film production. Actually the amount of constructive suggestion that emerged from any of these discussions was negligible. Foreign control of our cinemas was denounced, but nobody had any plan for getting rid of it. The importance of flavouring all cinema programmes with a dash of Irish was stressed, but everybody was delightfully vague as to how this was to be achieved. Many speakers were convinced that the Government "ought to do something"—in fact, the general trend was to push all the responsibility on to the Government—but Mr. O'Sheehan issued a warning that, if the Inter-Departmental Committee at present inquiring into Cinema in Ireland were to recommend the creation of a film industry in this country there were alien groups on the alert to grab it. What really is wanted, as Mr. P. O'Curry pointed out, is leadership, energy and courage to launch a film industry and build it up successfully. The Government could assist such an enterprise in many ways other than financial—Mr. Ernest Blythe suggested a quota—but, if the producers are to be hampered by patriotic bees in departmental bonnets, they never will get far. It must be borne in mind that, if Irish films are to be a financial success, they must appeal to a vastly larger audience than is to be found in this country, and must stand or fall by their entertainment value or artistic excellence alone. For this purpose it is not necessary to expend huge sums of money, but it is essential to enlist the best brains that we possess in literature, art and business. It should be possible to make the term "Irish Film" synonymous abroad with all that is best in Cinema. There is little use in discussing the matter, however, until the mysterious Inter-Departmental Committee publishes its report, which, we hope, will not be too long delayed.

FROM "THE TIMES"

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT.)

NORWAY'S PART

According to the latest information, says The Times in a leading article to-day, Norway is still defending herself with great gallantry in the circumstances of unpreparedness in which successive Governments have left her. Herr Nygaardsvold is at least making up for any remissness in this respect by his spirited appeal to his countrymen to ignore pro-German leaders and maintain the liberties and independence of their country. King Haakon, whom the Germans are pursuing with bomb and machine-gun, can be counted upon to give nothing away; and, although the regular army has a peace-time strength of only about one division, all Norwegians are trained in the use of the rifle. As sharpshooters and guerrillas they are busy dynamiting roads and bridges and otherwise giving an excellent account of themselves. In several isolated actions already reported they are emulating the gallant Finns. They are made of the same tough fibre, and they are certain at least to harass the Germans in much the same way as the Spaniards harassed Napoleonic invaders over a hundred years ago.

The air bases Hitler has seized may temporarily be of value to him, but from the naval point of view his position is worse than when he started. His fleet has for the first time exposed itself to open fight with the Allies; he has suffered crippling losses, and is only at great risk keeping sea communications open between the captured bases and his home ports. And so far from breaking the blockade, he has rendered its application much simpler for the British Navy. The supply of ore down the west coast of Norway, of which he wanted to make sure, has been stopped altogether, and he is not likely to get another ton by that route for the rest of the war.

25 YEARS AGO

From the Irish Times, 13th April, 1915.

A Lull in the West.

After several weeks of the most violent fighting in the sectors between the Meuse and the Moselle, with waves of attacks and counter-attacks from each side occurring daily from dawn to dusk, and even during the night, it was an item of news to hear yesterday that there had been no infantry engagements of any importance for the last twenty-four hours. The day was spent by the French in organising their positions that were won in the previous fighting; but at dawn yesterday the Germans launched another offensive. This attack was repulsed, however, after a two hours' battle.

No Prayers for Peace.

Dr. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard University, yesterday told a meeting of clergymen that the present was no time to pray for peace, especially for peace at any price. A too-speedy termination of the European conflict would, he considered, set civilisation back for several centuries. Ministers should not remain neutral when the ideals of civilisation had been smashed.

Self-Starters.

A half-page advertisement announced the arrival in Dublin of the latest consignment of "Maxwell" motor-cars. The manufacturers were proud to announce that these de luxe 18-22 h.p. cars were fitted with electric self-starters and electric lights. The price was £185.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Mr. Colin Rucker Eddison, of London, gave a lecture on "Christian Science," at the First Church of Christ, Scientist, Dublin, yesterday. He said that Christian Scientists turned to the Bible to learn about God and no body of people held the Bible in greater reverence. The way in which Christian Science enabled people to know God was by helping them to understand more intelligently the life and work of Christ. Jesus was the way-shower, in whose footsteps Christian Scientists endeavoured humbly to follow. Christian Science taught that evil and all its manifestations were untrue, unreal, and the destruction of sin, disease and death by Christ confirmed the conclusion. The Christ, truth, was knocking to-day at the hearts and minds of humanity in the teachings of Christian Science. A study of the Bible in the light of the teachings of Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy brought Christ to the human understanding.

SUDAN UNITED MISSION

Dr. B. McCullough gave an account of the proceedings, including a satisfactory financial statement, of the Dublin Auxiliary of the Sudan United Mission on the occasion of the annual meeting last night in the Metropolitan Hall, Dublin.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Strachan, missionaries on furlough, delivered interesting addresses on their work, which were illustrated by means of lantern views.

Mr. Gerald Brady presided.

LONDON LETTER

QUESTION OF TROOPS FOR NORWAY

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
FRIDAY NIGHT.

It is not yet known whether Britain and France have despatched troops to Norway, but it is apparent that the many reports from Stockholm yesterday, asserting that such troops had landed, were incorrect. It is rumoured to-day, however, that the Norwegian Government has pointed out to Britain and France some possible disembarkation points for troops and munitions, if occasion should arise. In view of the fact that Germany still is sending troops by aeroplane from Denmark, it seems reasonable to suppose that Norway will require reinforcements if she is to continue the fight for her freedom. It is stated that the German machines can convey a score of men on each trip, but that no artillery can be carried. Machine-guns, however, are another matter.

Fate of Danish Ships

The British Government will take over all Danish vessels in its ports, and the necessary legal procedure is being expedited so that the ships may be used to increase the mercantile marine. The ships have been seized as prizes, since, owing to the German occupation of Denmark, that country is regarded as enemy territory, and hence its property here can be dealt with by the Prize Courts. Nine Danish ships were held up at Grimsby yesterday, the crews not being permitted to leave. Norwegian shipping is not affected. It is thought likely, however, that its management will be entrusted to the committee appointed to represent British, French and Polish mercantile shipping interests. With regard to Danish shipping, France and the British Dominions are taking steps similar to those of Britain.

Norse and Danish Gold

Germany has secured little gold by the invasion of Denmark and Norway, as most of it already had been removed to other countries. The Danish gold reserve amounted to about £13,000,000, the bulk of which had been deposited with the Bank of England, while the Norwegian reserve, which stood at about £23,000,000, was split up, in order to spread the risk of loss. Some of the gold is known to have been deposited in London, and during the past few weeks gold to the value of about £8,000,000 was shipped from Oslo to New York. It is possible that the small reserve of gold held in Denmark has fallen into German hands, but the portion of the gold reserve held in Norway is understood to have been removed from Oslo to the interior of the country.

Italian Attitude

Italy's attitude towards the invasion of Denmark and Norway has been somewhat peculiar, but to-day it is apparent that public opinion there has undergone a change in the last twenty-four hours. The newspapers still declare that the Germans have been winning victories in the Skagerrak and in Norwegian waters, but this attitude is softened down. The work of the British Navy has made a profound impression upon the Italian people. In Italian diplomatic circles there are rumours of some interesting developments within the next few days, but it is asserted also that there is no reason to suppose that Italy will abandon her present neutrality. Something very drastic on the part of the belligerents would be needed to induce Italy to abandon her present position.

Mr. Lloyd George

Fifty years ago to-day Mr. Lloyd George, a young solicitor of advanced Radical views, took his seat in the House of Commons as Liberal member for Carnarvon. To-day he is still a member of the House of Commons, sitting for the same constituency. He succeeded the late Mr. T. P. O'Connor as father of the House, and now he has attained a record for unbroken representation of one place. Mr. Lloyd George, who is to be fêted in many ways, is in the best of health and spirits. He spent the day on his farm at Churt. Next week he is going to his constituency, where his jubilee will be celebrated on April 20th by a big non-political gathering and much rendering of Welsh harmonies.

Sir Ian Fraser's Return

Sir Ian Fraser, the blind chairman of St. Dunstan's Executive Council, was to-day returned unopposed as National Conservative M.P. for the Lonsdale Division of Lancashire. This will be the second time that Sir Ian has sat in the House of Commons. He represented St. Pancras, North, for twelve years in the Conservative interest, resigning in 1936 on his appointment as a Governor of the B.B.C. The by-election at Lonsdale was caused by the succession of Lord Balniel to his father's title of Lord Crawford and Balcarres.

New Shipping Code

The new shipping code just introduced for war-time purposes is capable of providing half-a-million phrases. A short time ago, when a ban was placed on the use of codes, there was keen disappointment at the absence of a suitable code to assist shipping men in their work, the industry being put to very great expense in cabling messages in full. The new code, compiled by men with a knowledge of shipping, has been approved, and will speed up business and save money. It contains a series of separate sections for the different trades, thus permitting rapid work in coding and de-coding. The half-million phrases in the system include 137,760 port-to-port combinations, 2,000 phrases relative to owners, and 23,000 dealing with loading and discharging. One word of five letters is sufficient to reveal the loading and discharging grain ports of a ship.

Railway Wages

The formal application now made by the National Union of Railwaymen, the Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, and the Railway Clerks' Association to the railway companies for a further increase in pay probably means a very long drawn-out disputation. Five hundred thousand employés are involved in the demands for an increase of six shillings a week for each man of the traffic grades and fifteen pounds per annum for the members of the salaried staffs. The six shillings represent the balance of the claim for ten shillings a week additional which was made last December, the settlement reached in January having given them an advance of four shillings a week. Negotiations have not yet been opened, but the three unions concerned have applied to the Railway Executive Committee for an early meeting to consider the matter.

CONFECTIONERS' PROBLEMS

Presiding at a meeting of the Confectioners' and Fruiterers' Association, at 28 Upper O'Connell, Dublin, Mr. J. G. Gogan, President, reported that, acting on the suggestion of the Association, a triple board has been formed recently at a meeting of representatives of the Association and of the Retail Tobacconists' and the Newsagents' Associations to deal with matters of common interest to the three organisations, such as price-cutting shops' legislation, etc.

MANY 'PLANES DOWN IN GRIM BATTLES

R.A.F. RAID IN THE SKAGERRAK

Attack on German Warships

BRITISH LOSE EIGHT GERMANS FOUR

Heavy Damage Inflicted in Flight over Stavanger

THE Royal Air Force yesterday had what the Air Ministry described as "hard-fought actions" during a search for the German Fleet.

While searching Norwegian and Danish waters the 'planes met with strong German opposition. Four Messerschmitts were shot down and two others are believed to have been destroyed.

British losses in the day's engagements were eight 'planes, and two others came down in the sea on the way home.

In a daring raid on Thursday night Wellington bombers, accompanied by fighters, inflicted heavy damage among 'planes, hangars and personnel on German airfields at Stavanger, Norway.

On the same night a German ammunition ship was blown up by a bomb.

BRITISH COMMUNIQUE

The British Air Ministry announced last night:—

"Extensive reconnaissance by aircraft of the Royal Air Force have been carried out over the North Sea and Skagerrak to-day in search of enemy naval forces.

"Reports so far received indicate that one formation of bombers penetrated Christiansand fjord and attacked two German warships.

"Our aircraft encountered heavy anti-aircraft fire and fighter opposition, and in the course of the engagement five of them were brought down.

"The full extent of the enemy loss is not known, but at least two enemy fighters were shot down in flames, and others were seen to be seriously damaged."

LATEST REPORT

TWELVE BRITISH AND GERMAN 'PLANES SHOT DOWN

News received at an early hour this morning stated:—Strong formations of British bombers searched Norwegian and Danish waters yesterday for units of the German Fleet.

It is known that in the day's hard-fought actions four Messerschmitt fighters were shot down, two more are believed to have been destroyed, and others were damaged.

The British Air Ministry announced early to-day:—

"Throughout yesterday a series of strong formations of R.A.F. bombers searched Norwegian and Danish waters for the purpose of locating and attacking units of the German Fleet returning to their home bases.

"As already reported, one formation penetrated into Kristiansand Fjord, attacked German warships, and met with strong opposition. Another formation proceeding north towards the Stavanger area was met by a large enemy fighter force. In the day's hard-fought actions four Messerschmitt fighters were shot down. Two more are believed to have been destroyed and others were damaged.

"Our losses in the day's engagements were eight aircraft. Two others came down on the sea on their way home."

GERMANS CLAIM EIGHT SHOT DOWN

PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.

BERLIN, Friday.

Eight British bombers of the most modern type are claimed to have been shot down during an attempt to attack German bases on the Norwegian coast this afternoon.

The communiqué reads: "British war planes attempted to attack German bases on the Norwegian coast this afternoon. German Messerschmitt 'planes made a timely entry into the conflict and inflicted sanguinary losses on the British aircraft.

"A total of eight British 'planes of the most modern type were shot down."

THE RAID ON STAVANGER

'PLANES WRECKED AND HANGARS BURNED

British bombers, accompanied by long-range fighters, in a daring double raid on the German-occupied Norwegian airfields at Stavanger on Thursday night, did great damage to hangars and parked warplanes, and killed many of the staff.

Numerous German fighters and bomber aeroplanes were wrecked by machine-gun fire. The British attackers were Wellingtons of the Coastal Command.

The fighters arrived first, dived upon the aerodrome, and took the Germans by surprise. They sprayed the airfield, aircraft and hangars with bullets before the anti-aircraft defences could be brought into action.

SECOND ATTACK

Between them they seriously damaged three Junkers bombers and, it is estimated, killed or injured twenty of the personnel in this initial attack. The moment the attack finished and the British aircraft began to climb for a further offensive, intense machine-gun and anti-aircraft fire broke out. The British 'planes escaped damage.

Half an hour later the Wellingtons arrived. Approaching from the east, they swept down on Stavanger in another surprise attack. Heavy bombs were dropped, and the bombers were immediately met by intense, but inaccurate, anti-aircraft fire. Despite this, they returned to the attack, machine-gunning German machine-gun posts, anti-aircraft batteries, hangars and aircraft on the ground.

BIG FIRE STARTED

Considerable damage was done and a great fire started. By this time many German fighter aircraft had arrived from neighbouring aerodromes, and they attacked the raiders as they were about to return to their bases.

There was a fierce battle, but only one of the British aircraft failed to return to its base.

MIDNIGHT GUNFIRE

GERMAN STEAMER BLOWN UP

STROMSTAD (NEAR THE NORWEGIAN FRONTIER), Friday.

British units are believed to have attacked a German convoy heading for Norway early to-day. Shortly after midnight heavy gunfire at sea was heard in towns and villages along the Swedish coast at the entrance to the Oslo Fjord. Signal rockets pierced the darkness, and the sky was ablaze with searchlights. Houses on the small islands facing Stromstad were shaken by gunfire.

At dawn watchers on the small island of Koster heard several explosions, and saw a large German steamer blow up. It is believed that it was laden with troops.

The boat was enveloped in flames, which, fed by oil from its tanks, blazed furiously for an hour.

Another boat, loaded with ammunition, was sunk.—(Press Association War Special.)

BODIES IN THE SEA

Fishermen returning from fishing off Lysekil, about 45 miles farther down the Swedish coast, reported to-day that they had crossed the spot where the German boats were sunk two days ago.

The position was marked, they said, by large patches of oil and the bodies of German sailors.

One man who was still alive was taken aboard by the fishermen. He told them that all the bodies belonged to the German cargo boat, Antares, which was sunk on Wednesday.

GREAT EXPLOSION AT SEA

R.A.F. OFFICER'S DESCRIPTION

The German munitions ship, which was successfully bombed by the R.A.F. in Danish waters on Thursday night, was first detected by the light of a parachute flare dropped by the attacking aircraft.

"The night was pitch dark," said the captain of one of the British aircraft, describing his experiences last night, "and at first there appeared to be very little traffic in the target area. Then we spotted a faint, small light bobbing on the dark surface of the water. It seemed worth investigation, so, coming down low, we turned sharply towards it and released a parachute flare.

"The dazzling light made the sea almost as bright as day, and below us we saw about ten grey-coloured ships steaming north in company at about ten knots. Flaming onions and anti-aircraft fire came sailing up at us as we manœuvred into position, and with our target clearly illuminated by the slowly-descending flares we launched our attack.

THE LAST BOMB

"We dropped several bombs in quick succession, and it was the last to go that found the target. There was an almighty explosion, as if an ammunition store had been blown up or a boiler exploded. We were jerked about thirty feet upwards by the force of the explosion, and our tail gunner, when he had recovered his balance, reported that sparks could be seen shooting out from the ship.

The captain of this aircraft, a squadron-leader, who has been in the R.A.F. since he was 17½, was also the pilot of the first aircraft to bomb Sylt during the recent raid on that island. His second pilot, a young New Zealander and former wool-buyer, also has a previous exploit as a member of the crew who last November brought their bomber safely home across the North Sea after the greater part of the covering of one wing had been stripped off.

FIVE BIG PORTS HELD BY GERMANS

Norway Reports Sinking of Battleship Gneisenau

SWEDEN WILL FIGHT TO PRESERVE LIBERTY

BATTLES are proceeding between Norwegian and German forces north-east of Oslo, according to Norwegian communiqués, which also state that telephone and telegraph communications with Germany have been cut.

The Germans are now reported to control Oslo Fjord, Christiansand, Stavanger, Bergen and Narvik.

The 26,000-ton German battleship Gneisenau, according to a Norwegian message, has been sunk in Oslo Fjord.

While German bombers raided many Norwegian towns, firing numerous buildings, the British Royal Air Force continued to make raids on the German bases, shooting up aerodromes and destroying munitions ships.

Swedish reports say that another troopship was blown up at dawn yesterday.

Britain's "biggest ever" minefield, bottling up the German Fleet, was one more move in the Allied action.

The Swedish Premier (M. Hansson), in a broadcast last night, said: "We will fight to preserve our liberty." He declared that Sweden would not permit the passage of "foreign troops," while in Berlin the German spokesman said that if Stockholm were careful, there would be no danger of Germany having to occupy Swedish bases. If King Haakon escaped to Sweden and continued to rule, Sweden would have to take the consequences.

Major Hvosleff, appointed Foreign Minister in the Provisional Government, has thrown up his job and joined the Norwegian Army.

Holland continues preparations, evacuating certain frontier hospitals and schools, and tension prevails in the country.

Belgium's Foreign Minister yesterday reiterated that his country would fight if necessary.

DENMARK

"DO NOT INSULT THE ARMY"

DANISH PREMIER'S APPEAL

PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.

DENMARK, Friday.

The Danish Prime Minister, M. Stauning, issued an appeal to the Danish public to-night "to refrain from shouting insults to officers and men of the Danish Army in the street," reports Copenhagen Radio.

"The public must realise," says the appeal, "that the Danish Army forces did their duty when the German troops invaded Denmark. There is no reason for resentment against the Army.

"The troops which occupied our country on Tuesday met with resistance until the Government decided to submit to the German occupation."

MEETINGS IN COPENHAGEN BANNED

BERLIN, Friday.

All public meetings have been banned in Copenhagen by order of the police, according to a Copenhagen telegram received here. Church Services only are exempted. The order will be extended to general meetings and demonstrations in all parts of the country.

FRENCH WAR CABINET

MEETING IN PARIS

PARIS, Friday.

The French War Cabinet met to-night at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, under the Presidency of M. Reynaud.

General Gamelin, the Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Forces; General Vuillemin, the Commander-in-Chief of the French Air Force, and Admiral Darlan, the Commander-in-Chief of the French Sea Forces, were present.

ARTILLERY STILL ACTIVE

To-night's official French war communique states:—

"Artillery activity between the Vosges and the Rhine."

BIGGEST MINEFIELD EVER LAID

The Allies' new minefield, embracing the Skagerrak and Kattegat, cutting Germany's communications to the North Sea, is probably the biggest ever laid.

At its westernmost limit it extends 420 miles northwards from a point off the Dutch coast near Schilling to 60 miles south-west of Bergen, then eastwards to the Danish coast, embracing the whole of that part of the North Sea and the Skagerrak.

Late News appears in Page 8.

The largest field laid in the last war was that from the Orkneys to Norway—a distance of 233 miles, and including 71,000 mines.

The field does not enter either Swedish or Dutch territorial waters.

The sowing of the mines, which menace German shipping across the Skagerrak to Oslo fiord, was announced by the British Admiralty yesterday.

DESTINY KNOCKS AT SWEDEN'S DOOR

TRIBUTE TO THE BRITISH FLEET

STOCKHOLM, Friday.

A warm tribute to the British Fleet's achievements off the Norwegian coast is published in the Handelstidning to-day. The newspaper says that the Fleet's action in breaking through the "Baltic mine barrage" into the Kattegat may well prove to be "the Marne" of this war.

"At a time when the prospect was indeed black, the Allied Fleets appeared off the coasts of Norway. The greatest battle in naval history began. Their ability to attack was shown to be as strong as in the time of Nelson.

"For a second time destiny is knocking at Sweden's door. While we are confident of the ability of Britain and France to deal with the affair without our help, we do not think that Sweden can regain her position by cowardly concessions."

It pays to beg in India, judging by the latest figures given by an official of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. Two thousand professional beggars of Bombay City under the age of 12 years netted £76,750 between them in a year—that is, nearly £40 each. Children are given a systematic course in begging, and as a price for tuition they have to pay 2s. a day.

HOLLAND

NAZI M.P.'S ABSENT FROM HOUSE

STIR IN POLITICAL CIRCLES

PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.

THE HAGUE, Friday.

The absence of all four National-Socialist members from the Second Chamber of the Dutch Parliament to-day has created a stir in political circles here.

It is believed in some quarters that their absence may be linked with the semi-official statement concerning "measures of internal security."

M. Izerman, a Social-Democrat, mentioned in the Chamber this afternoon that in the last few days only one of the National-Socialist members had been present, and then only for a short time. He supposed they were "Somewhere in Europe" or "Somewhere in the Netherlands."

The Prime Minister, Jonkheer de Greer, replying in the debate, deplored the fact that a National-Socialist member who had put a question was not present.

Services on the Dutch railways, which have been restricted since Wednesday owing to the recall of troops on leave, are returning to normal on Sunday.

TENSION CONTINUES

PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.

AMSTERDAM, Friday.

An atmosphere of tension prevails in Holland, though no developments have occurred to-day to accentuate it. The announcement that the train services will be restored to normal on Sunday was reassuring, because for the last few days railways have been almost solely at the service of the armed forces.

Nightly troop movements, evacuation of certain hospitals and schools near the frontier and other appropriate measures are being carried out unobtrusively and without hitch.

THE QUEEN MARY

PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.

ROME, Friday.

The 81,235 tons Cunard White Star liner Queen Mary has arrived at Halifax, Nova Scotia, to embark a contingent of Canadian troops, according to an Ottawa telegram published by the Stefani Agency.

The Queen Mary left New York, where she had been lying since the beginning of the war, on March 21st for an unknown destination. Members of the crew stated that her normal passenger capacity of about 2,000 had been increased to 21,000.

The Mauretania, which left at the same time, later passed through the Panama Canal.

GERMANS OCCUPY OSLO

Many Battles Now In Progress

EIGHT SOUTHERN TOWNS BOMBED

THE Norwegian High Command communiqué, broadcast by Stockholm radio last night, sums up the military situation as follows:—

The Germans have occupied Oslo and its immediate neighbourhood. Norwegian troops are holding a line north and north-east of Oslo.

German forces are in control of Christiansand, Stavanger, Bergen, Trondhjem, and two other coastal points in Southern Norway.

The rest of Southern Norway is held by the Norwegians.

The Germans have occupied Narvik, in Northern Norway, but otherwise the Norwegians hold the entire North.

"Recent attempts to advance from Narvik by German motorised units were repulsed," the communiqué adds.

"The Norwegian troops suffered only a few casualties.

"Mobilisation is proceeding. The influx of conscripts and volunteers is overwhelming."

Reporting the bombing by the Germans of eight towns in Southern Norway, the communiqué says that a number of houses were set on fire, but there were few casualties.

It was learned in London last night that the German detachments now in Norway are receiving reinforcements from the Nazi army of occupation in Denmark.

They are being flown to Norway by troop-carrying aircraft, and yesterday Mr. Eric Andreas Colban, the Norwegian Minister in London, saw Lord Halifax to discuss action by the Allies to stop this traffic.

Only two Norwegian broadcasting stations are left in the hands of the Norwegian Government. These are the stations of Bodo and Tromso. The B.B.C. is keeping in contact with them.

Latest reports, it was stated in London last night, tell of battles in progress in all parts of Norway.

An earlier Norwegian communiqué, issued last night, states that General Erichson, one of the Norwegian Commanders, reports that battles are going on at Fossum and Langenes Bridge, north of Oslo.

"Bridges across the Glomma and Vormen Rivers (in front of the Norwegian positions) have been mined," the communiqué adds.

"General Erichson reports also that all telephone and telegraph lines to Germany have been cut.

"The electricity supply of Oslo has been interrupted by the opening of a dam.

"The commander of the Finmark district (in the extreme North of Norway beyond Narvik) reports that foreign warships have been observed off the coast, but their nationality is not known.

"Mobilisation of the sixth Norwegian Division in this area has been completed, and the troops are impatient to come into action in the South as soon as they are sure that the coast is safe from attack."

BATTLE FOR GOODS

Sabotage Mystery in Yugoslavia

WARRING NATIONS BLAME EACH OTHER

ASSOCIATED PRESS.

ZAGREB (YUGOSLAVIA).

SABOTAGE is playing a big part in the battle of the warring nations for the produce of Yugoslavia. Factories have been blown up in the night, Danube barges have been sunk, loaded freight trains have been mysteriously held up. The air is full of charges and counter-charges.

Two and a half million pounds worth of metals, live-stock, maize and other foodstuffs is the prize for which Germany and Britain are contesting. In normal times Germany takes nearly £1,250,000 worth of these goods; Britain less than £250,000.

But now that foodstuffs and metals are nearly as important as shells and 'planes both nations are using, judging by the charges and counter-charges, every conceivable weapon in their fight to get what Yugoslavia produces—and to prevent the "other fellow" from getting it.

MYSTERIOUS HAPPENINGS

In Slovenia, along the old Austrian border, there are many villages with almost completely German populations—people who work long hours in textile factories making goods for shipment to the Reich. Lately several of these small factories have been wrecked in the night by bombs. Germans accuse British agents of being responsible.

Along the coast there have been a number of accidents on ships about to sail for England with war-needed goods. German agents are accused of sabotage. Germany moves all her exports from Yugoslavia by rail. Often fully loaded wagons have been held up for days—sometimes weeks. Complaints have been made and investigations conducted.

"OTHER FELLOW" BLAMED

Railway officials find that a certain string of trucks are immovable because another string of trucks blocks the line. Finally, the key to the tangle is located—a truck whose wheels, for no apparent reason, had been locked when it was loaded. Germans say that such cases are the result of British connivance; that British agents have paid railway employés a certain amount per day per car for delaying train movements.

Along the docks there has been some sporadic labour trouble. Englishmen say that they have found traces of the work of German agents stirring up strife. Several barges have been sunk at strategic points in the Danube, and several months ago a mysterious Danube "accident" was reported in diplomatic circles.

A string of Czech barges, in the charge of Czech bostmen, was on its way from Rumania one night when an "accident" occurred, during which all the oil was dumped into the river. The Germans said, "Sabotage again."

BIG EXPLOSION IN GERMANY

SUPPOSED MUNITION DUMP FIRE

PRESS ASSOCIATION WAR SPECIAL.

BRUSSELS, Friday.

A violent explosion at a point in Germany a few miles from the Belgian frontier is reported in a message from Eupen.

Huge flames were visible from the frontier, and a series of detonations could be heard.

RALLYING TO THE COLOURS

Norwegians are rallying strongly to the colours, and according to reports from the frontier to the Swedish News Agency the morale of the men and of the population generally is excellent.

The international brigade which went to Finland (1,500 strong, and made up principally of well-trained British and Hungarian volunteers) is reported in Paris to be on the point of leaving Lapua, Finland, for Norway. The brigade is made up of 22 different nationalities.

BIG ACTION REPORTED IMMINENT

According to the Swedish newspaper "Allehanda," strong concentrations of British naval forces and aircraft have been observed at Namsos, in Folsen Fjord, suggesting that an important action is being prepared.

KING HAAKON

A Berlin telegram states that in a recent interview King Haakon was reported to have rejected German peace proposals.

It is understood in Berlin, says an Amsterdam message, that the German Minister in Oslo had instructions to make another effort to reach King Haakon.

An official Norwegian communiqué says that Major Hvosleff, appointed Foreign Minister in the Provisional Government at Oslo, arrived in Stockholm yesterday after throwing up his post.

He said that he placed himself completely at the disposal of the Norwegian Commander-in-Chief. Later he was flown to Norway.

Meanwhile, the significant news emerges that the Reich had virtually abandoned hope of being able to come to agreement with the existing Norwegian Government for the administration of Norway under German protection.

GERMAN WARSHIP SUNK

LAUNCHED BY FUEHRER IN 1936

The German 26,000-ton battleship Gneisenau was sunk in Oslo fjord, according to a Norwegian communiqué broadcast by the Stockholm radio.

The Gneisenau, a sister ship to the Scharnhorst, was launched on December 8th, 1936.

According to "Jane's Fighting Ships," she carries a complement of 1,461 men.

She was armed with nine 11-inch guns, and carried four aircraft. Her speed was 27 knots.—War Special.

The Gneisenau, one of the newest and most powerful German vessels, was launched by Hitler late in 1936.

Mr. Churchill, in his speech in the House of Commons yesterday, said: "The ships of this class—the Scharnhorst and the Gneisenau—are most formidable vessels."

The passage in the communiqué dealing with naval operations, in which the sinking of the Gneisenau is announced, reads:

"The Germans have forced their way into Uste Fjord, to Arendal, Kristiansand, Egersund, Stavanger, Bergen, Aalesund, Trondhjem and Narvik.

"Norwegian warships and coastal fortifications have inflicted heavy casualties on the Germans.

"The battleship Gneisenau has been sunk in the Oslo Fjord.

THE EMDEN

"A 6,000-ton cruiser, assumed to be the Emden, and several small warships, destroyers and mine-sweepers have also been sunk. The cruiser Karlsruhe (6,000 tons) was sunk off Christiansand.

"In addition, the destroyer Aeger sank a large German vessel off Stavanger.

"A German troopship was sunk at Bergen and a direct hit was scored on a warship.

"Several Norwegian ships have been sunk, but the number of dead is uncertain."

BRITISH DESTROYERS SUNK

GERMAN CLAIM

"As already reported, six British destroyers were sunk off Narvik alone.

"More destroyers have been destroyed by German naval forces and German air forces.

"In a battle with a German cruiser, a British destroyer was so heavily hit that she burst into two parts and immediately sank. Some of the crew were rescued by the victorious German cruiser.

"British cruisers and battleships have also suffered severely from the attacks of the German Air Force and German warships."

OSLO-STOCKHOLM

COMMUNICATIONS SEVERED

STOCKHOLM, Friday.

Telegraph communications between Oslo and Stockholm were severed to-night, apparently because of damage in Norway.

The newspaper Dagens Nyheter to-night quoted Norwegian officials in Stockholm as saying that all German warships at Narvik had been sunk by the Norwegians last night.

The number of warships there at the time was given as four.

CREW OF THE HARDY

ROWED ASHORE AT NARVIK—MISSING

Forty or fifty men of the crew of the destroyer Hardy, which went ashore damaged in the gallant expedition at Narvik, rowed ashore, fully armed, it was disclosed in authoritative circles in London last night.

They were last seen in their boats rowing ashore, as though, in the words of an expert, "they were starting off on a little military expedition of their own."

Nothing has since been heard of this gallant little band. They may have been taken prisoner. They may be roving over the wild and rugged hills of Norway. It has been conjectured that the fact that these men put ashore from the Hardy may have accounted for the reports—subsequently announced to be false—that British troops had been landed at Narvik.

THE BALKANS

RUMANIAN EXPORTS TO GERMANY

SUSPENSION OF LOADINGS

Associated Press.

BUCHAREST, Friday.

Rumania suddenly suspended the loading of railway wagons for Germany to-night. At the same time, it was learnt that the loading of oil barges on the Danube was being suspended for several days. The action amounted to a virtual embargo on exports to Germany, and fear was expressed here that it would worsen German-Rumanian economic relations.

To-night's move, it was learnt, followed the receipt of a German notification that the Reich was putting a virtual embargo on the export to Rumania of a long list of commodities.

The Rumanian General Staff conferred in an urgent meeting with Premier Tatarescu to-night.

GERMAN NOTE EXPECTED

Informed quarters said that the Government expected to receive stiff German demands within a few days. To-morrow the Cabinet's Economic Council will prepare a long list of raw materials definitely banned for export as being vital for Rumania's own use.

Germany is expected to demand that Rumania shall demobilise to accelerate work in the factories and fields. Informed sources said that the Germans will claim Rumania as part of the Reich's lebensraum, and force her to direct all her exports to Germany, cutting entirely her trade with the Allies. Sources close to the Government said that there was little doubt that such demands would be rejected by King Carol and his Government.

The official explanation for the suspension of the loading of barges was that high water at Giurgiu, big oil centre, made it impossible to connect the barges with their loading racks.

German trade quarters here branded the explanation a "pretext."

NERVOUSNESS IN THE BALKANS

FEAR THAT WAR MAY SPREAD

The war in the North is causing increasing alarm in the Balkan countries, declared the official Hungarian wireless last night. The question is being asked whether South-East Europe will now be involved in hostilities.

It is not known whether in this event the war will spread to the Balkans through the Mediterranean or the Continent.

"For this reason," adds the Hungarian wireless, "the attitude of the great neutral Powers is of decisive importance. Consequently the reaction of Italy is being watched in Budapest with the greatest attention.

"As a result of the international tension there is a marked tendency in the Balkan States to draw closer together."—(Press Association War Special.)

STEEPLECHASE RIDER KILLED

KILDARE POINT-TO-POINT ACCIDENT

Mr. Kevin Prendergast, a promising young steeplechase rider, a son of Mr. Patrick Prendergast, of Athy, Co. Kildare, was killed when his mount, Blackwood Cross, fell at the first fence in the Farmers' Light-Weight Race at the Kildare Hunt's Point-to-Point Meeting at Halverstown yesterday.

Mr. Prendergast was thrown heavily on his head, and before he could get clear the filly rolled over him. Surgeon Cannon, of Kildare, was promptly in attendance, and the injured jockey was removed in the ambulance to the Drogheda Memorial Hospital, Curragh, but Mr. Prendergast died on the way.

NEWSPAPER LORRY BURNED

BELFAST STREET INCIDENT

From Our Correspondent.

BELFAST, Friday.

A motor lorry conveying the Irish Press from Dublin to Belfast was burned in the Cullingtree road area of Belfast this morning. The lorry was delivering supplies to a newsagent in a Nationalist district when five men, believed to have been armed, appeared. They ordered the two men on the lorry to drive it to Cape street, in the Cullingtree road area. Here the men were ordered from the lorry and the raiders took the extra petrol supply which had been carried from Dublin, poured it over the lorry and papers and set them alight. The raiders then decamped.

Police were soon on the scene, but could not prevent the destruction of the lorry and the newspapers.

SWEDEN MINES HER COAST

German Hint About King Haakon

PREMIER ON DEFENCE OF LIBERTY

THE German Press accuses Swedish newspapers of failing to maintain strict neutrality. It is added that if King Haakon and his Cabinet escaped on to Swedish soil, and continued to rule from there, Sweden would have to take the consequences.

In the meantime, Sweden, while preserving her neutrality, is leaving nothing to chance. She has enforced black-outs along the coast, and, with a view to protecting Gothenburg and other towns, has mined the coast along a line one hundred miles in length.

AIR RAID ALARMS AT GOTHENBURG

SWEDES LAY MINES

Press Association War Special.

STOCKHOLM, Friday.

Sweden is now in an advanced state of preparedness to meet all eventualities. Official orders have been given for lighthouses on the west coast between Haalloe and Tistlarna to be blacked out at night. Partial or general black-out tests took place at Malmo, Scano and Gothenburg, where air raid exercises were held during the night.

Gothenburg harbour has been completely protected as a result of the minefields laid by the Swedes in territorial waters for a distance of about 100 miles along the west coast. Gothenburg is approximately in the centre of this mined area, which would include the region just north-west of Uddevalla. Precautionary measures have been taken also round Malmo harbour.

GERMAN PRESS ATTACKS

German Press attacks have now been launched against Sweden, according to Berlin Correspondent of the Svenska Dagbladet. The Swedish newspapers are accused of failing to maintain an attitude of strict neutrality over the events in Norway. The Press is alleged to have "played up" the angle of British help to Norway, while the Swedish wireless has been placed at the disposal of Norwegian "agents."

These newspaper attacks had their inspiration in Berlin political circles, where, an Amsterdam message stated, serious warnings were given to avoid doing anything that might cause Germany to doubt her neutrality. "Sweden's immediate future depends on Stockholm's forbidding everything that endangers her neutrality." A German spokesman said: "So long as this is done, there is no reason for Germany to occupy bases in Sweden also." If, for instance, it was added, King Haakon and his Cabinet escaped on to Swedish soil, and continued to rule from there, Sweden would have to take the consequences.

Some doubt is expressed in Berlin as to the propriety of M. Hambro (Speaker of the Norwegian Storting) staying at the Grand Hotel, Stockholm, and starting a sort of Norwegian news agency there. The Swedish Censor is commended for having cancelled the broadcast which M. Hambro was to have made last night.

SWEDEN TO REFUSE PASSAGE TO TROOPS

M. Hansson (Swedish Prime Minister), broadcasting to-night, said that Sweden would refuse passage to any foreign troops. "Sweden," he stated, "is determined to observe her principle of strict neutrality. This means that she reserves the rights of independent judgment. It is not in accordance with strict neutrality to allow any scope for foreign enterprises. No demands in that direction have been put to us, but if such demands are put forward they will have to be refused. To guard our neutrality means that the country will be defended in case of necessity. If war comes we will fight to preserve our liberty."

EVACUATION PLANS

REPORTED ACTION BY ALLIED CONSULATES

Press Association War Special.

PARIS, Friday.

The British and French Consulates at Gothenburg and Malmo are making preparations for the evacuation of their nationals, says a Havas Agency despatch from Gothenburg to-day.

The American Consulate, it is stated, has been authorised by Washington to shelter the personnel and the archives of the Allied Consulates in these two towns, if necessary.

There is no confirmation of these reports in London, the Press Association adds.

Voluntary evacuation of women and children from towns in Southern Sweden opposite Denmark and Germany, especially Gothenburg, Malmo and Helsingborg, is going on rapidly by road and rail. The Swedes are vigorously building air-raid shelters.

TAKEN AS PRIZES

DANISH SHIPS IN BRITISH PORTS

It was learned on inquiry yesterday that all Danish ships in British ports have now been taken over by the British authorities as prizes. This has been done because the Danish Government is not at present in a position to enter into free negotiations. The vessels have accordingly been placed at the disposal of the Ministry of Shipping.

At present there are twenty Danish ships in ports. The total gross tonnage of these twenty ships is about 26,000 tons.

When the train later reached Sarpsborg, which is under Norwegian control, eighteen Germans were arrested.

SHOT FIRED IN CORK RADIO STATION

GOVERNMENT CRITICISED BY RAIDER

Listeners to the news service broadcast from the Cork radio station last night were astonished at a remarkable interruption. There was a sudden change in the announcers, and the newcomer sharply criticised the Government. After five minutes this broadcast ended, and after an interval the normal programme was resumed.

Later it was learned that three men who entered the station secured control of the service. Two of them guarded the officials, while a third spoke through the microphone.

Before they left a shot was fired which damaged the piano in the studio.

THE NATIONAL UNIVERSITY

SENATE'S TRIBUTE TO DR. COFFEY

The Senate of the National University of Ireland met on Thursday, with the Chancellor of the University in the chair, and passed a resolution placing on record their "keen appreciation of the signal services which Dr. Denis J. Coffey has rendered to the University."

The resolution, which was proposed by the Vice-Chancellor (the Right Rev. Mons. Hynes, President, University College, Galway), and seconded by Mr. Patrick J. Merriman, Pro-Vice-Chancellor (President, University College, Cork), pointed out that Dr. Coffey, from the foundation of the University until a few days ago had scarcely ever been absent from meetings. His views were always listened to with the greatest respect, and generally were adopted; for his great anxiety to promote the interests of the University was always recognised, and the accuracy of his judgment seldom questioned.

"It would be very difficult, indeed," said the resolution, "to exaggerate the greatness of his work for the University. In his retirement the University has undoubtedly suffered a very great loss. We are deeply grateful to him, and we wish him very many happy years."

The Senate decided that the D.Econ.Sc. Degree (Honoris Causa) in the faculty of Arts should be conferred on Professor Patrick McGilligan, M.A., T.D., in recognition of his services to the University.

It was decided to confer the M.Comm. Degree (Official) on Mr. Norman C. Jeffares, who had been a member of the staff of the University since its inception nearly 31 years ago, and who had been accountant clerk for the past 16 years.

The Senate also decided that the title of the Travelling Studentship in Physiology should be "The Dr. Coffey Travelling Studentship in Physiology," as a memorial of the valuable services rendered by the outgoing President of University College, Dublin.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

LEIX MALTING AND LICENSED TRADE

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—The successful representations made to Messrs. Guinness by the Licensed Grocers' and Vintners' Protection Association to postpone the final step in the closing down of the Mountmellick Maltings, Leix, pending the result of an interview which a deputation from the National Council of this Association is to have with the Finance Minister on Tuesday, the 16th inst., in connection with the beer and spirit duties, now places the fate of this industry entirely in the hands of our Government.

The struggle to preserve this industry has proceeded since April, 1939, when Messrs. Guinness intimated that it was not their intention to renew the contract for malt. After numerous representations, in which Mr. Lemass, then Minister for Industry and Commerce, took an active part, the firm reversed their decision and renewed the contract for a further year. (It is well to point out that malting contracts with Messrs. Guinness are only annual ones at any time.)

Messrs. Guinness base their plea for the closing of the Mountmellick Maltings on two important facts:

(1) Decrease in supply of local barley below required amount to fulfill malting contract.

(2) An over-capacity for malting in Eire, created by excessive taxation on the brewing industry.

There will be no shortage of barley in the Mountmellick area this coming season and the malting contract could be met in full by the local farmers. There is still an import of malt into Eire, which from January to August, 1939, reached the value of close on £104,000.

The question of taxation on the brewing industry is, no doubt, the outstanding problem. In this country it has been kept at the war level of 100s. per standard barrel since the Great War as against 78s. in Great Britain and Northern Ireland. Such tactics resulted in the decrease of revenue from Excise duty as follows:—

Year ended March, 1936.
Excise revenue £5,640,415 17 11
Year ended March, 1939.
Excise revenue £5,066,753 6 6

At the close of last year came the Emergency Budget when, despite the foregoing figures, a further tax of 12s. per standard barrel was imposed. This final blow has been a crushing one and the fate of the whole industry now trembles in the balance.

It is possible that the returns from Excise duty since the Emergency Budget was introduced may be proved satisfactory by the Minister for Finance, but it must be borne in mind that figures to date will be largely artificial, having regard to the fact that there was a tremendous withdrawal from bond before the Budget. The true situation, however, will be shown in coming months, taking into consideration the great reduction in sales since the increased taxation.

The crippled state of the brewing industry is of first rate national and industrial importance. It is an industry which imposes no extra charge—i.e., requires no spoon-feeding, no bounties, no risking of hundreds of thousands of pounds in experiments. All it requires is a relaxing of too severe taxation.

It is hoped that all those public bodies who have the industrial welfare of our country at heart will awake from their slumber and back as strongly as possible the effort which is about to be made by the licensed trade to preserve the brewing industry in Eire, an industry so well suited to an agricultural country.—Yours, etc.,

MARY O'CONOR.

PAUL HENRY'S PICTURES

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

Sir,—This year there has been quite a number of exhibitions of paintings. Most of our leading painters have held one-man shows. Among the latest exhibitions is one by Paul Henry, at Combridge's, who is considered by many as one of our leading landscape painters. Is Henry's painting of significance to these times? Does it represent modern Ireland as it is to-day, or is it merely a product of fancy, the sort of fancy that was prevalent here twenty years ago.

Of course, many will say that painting should not have any relationship to contemporary life. Admittedly certain painting need not have, but surely paintings which represent Ireland should have that relationship with real life.

Ireland is not only beautiful blue hills and white cottages. Ireland is not just Connemara. Henry is a descriptive painter, but does he describe modern Ireland? An artist cannot but be affected by his environment, and if he is a descriptive painter, this environment without any exceptions, must affect him. An artist cannot be selective. He cannot lock himself up in his own world of fancy. It becomes purely personal art. And it was this personal art that caused the breach between art and the people in the nineteenth century.

The greatest gift of democracy is the spreading of culture. As a democracy will we carry this out? Without the help of the artists it can never be achieved.—Yours, etc.,

MICHAEL BERESFORD.

OBITUARY

DR. S. D. CLEMENTS

The death has occurred at the Mansions, Sandylands Promenade, Leeds, of Dr. Samuel David Clements, a well-known practitioner, aged eighty-one. The third of the six sons of Mr. James Clements, of Carrigalen, Co. Leitrim, Dr. Clements studied at Edinburgh University, and qualified as L.R.C.P. and L.R.C.S. Some forty-one years ago he bought the practice of Dr. G. M. Sharp, of Farnley, Leeds, who became his father-in-law, and he remained in practice there till about six years ago, when he retired. He was well known and esteemed in Farnley and Wortley, being public vaccination and medical officer for the districts there. Dr. Clements did not take an active part in public life. He was, indeed, of a quiet and studious disposition. A fine Greek scholar, he was a prolific reader, and besides keeping abreast of medical progress, he won considerable recognition for his literary work. Dr. Clements's widow is the well-known Secretary of the Women's Luncheon Club. A younger brother, the late Mr. James Clements, was managing director of Messrs. Switzer and Co., Ltd., Dublin.

MR. WILLIAM H. McGUIRE

Mr. William H. McGuire, of Quay House, Wexford, whose death is announced, was a former member of the Wexford Corporation and the Wexford Harbour Commissioners, and was prominently associated with the shipping industry.

ST. PATRICK'S NURSES' HOME

A YEAR'S GOOD WORK

The Archbishop of Dublin yesterday presided at the annual meeting of the St. Patrick's Nurses' Home, 101 St. Stephen's Green, Dublin.

In the course of his address, the Archbishop said that it was a relief to turn from wireless and newspapers, with dreadful news of domination of the weak by the strong, to work of kindness and love and alleviation of suffering, such as that done by the nurses of St. Patrick's Home.

The annual report, read by Lady Moore, gave an account of the valuable work done by the Superintendent and the nursing staffs. It was stated that during a period of 53 years countless visits had been paid for the relief and help of the sick poor in their own homes. It was specially desired that the clergy of all denominations, as well as members of the medical profession, should bring deserving cases under the notice of the Superintendent. No less than 61,495 visits had been paid during the year. Fifteen nurses had finished their training, and had taken up their work in various districts in Ireland, including the far West.

THE NURSES' SERVICES

The Rev. Richard Dowse, M.A., proposing the adoption of the report, spoke of the splendid work done by the nurses, and expressed the hope that the St. Patrick's Home would continue, even after the State had taken over the care of the poor in their own homes.

Dr. Cyril Murphy, seconding the motion, also praised the silent and efficient work done by the nurses.

The Superintendent, Miss Melville, made an appeal for bedding and warm outdoor clothing for the use of convalescent patients, and for dressings of all kinds.

The Archdeacon of Dublin spoke on the psychological effect of the nurses' visits upon the morale of the patients in poor surroundings, and also of the work done among those who had left hospital and were convalescent.

The Dean of St. Patrick's said that no bequest would be better directed than to the support of the home.

Miss Colburn also spoke.

ARGYLL ELECTION

GOVERNMENT CANDIDATE RETURNED

The British Government candidate, Major Duncan McCallum, won the Argyll by-election, the result of which was declared last night, with a majority of 5,009 over his Scottish Nationalist opponent. The figures were:—

Major Duncan McCallum (Nat. Conservative)	12,317
Mr. William Power (Scottish Nat.)	7,308
Government majority	5,009

The by-election was caused by the death of Mr. F. A. Macquisten, K.C.

At the last election the figures were: F. A. Macquisten (Conservative), 13,200; B. A. Murray (Liberal), 11,486. Conservative majority, 1,714.

SUPERPHOSPHATE PRICES

MINISTER'S DAIL STATEMENT

In connection with the reports which appeared in newspapers yesterday of the reply to a question in the Dail on the previous day relating to a bounty on imported superphosphate, and of various supplementary questions which followed, the Minister for Agriculture desires to make it clear that when he said that: "We will probably get manure from two of our former sources—Holland and Belgium. That manure, if got, will be sold here as cheaply as Irish-manufactured," he had in mind the proposed importation of superphosphate by certain organisations who are in a position to cut out distribution and other costs and thus to supply this manure, if it arrives, to their associated farmers, at approximately the same price as the retail price of home-manufactured superphosphate.

As the landed price of the imported manure is in excess of the ex-factory price of home-manufactured superphosphate, superphosphate cannot be imported and sold at the same retail price as the home-manufactured article, unless in cases such as those above-mentioned, where distribution charges can be eliminated.

DUBLIN CITY RATES

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE PROTEST

A deputation from the Dublin Chamber of Commerce called upon the City Manager yesterday afternoon to protest against the proposed increase in the city rates.

The deputation pointed out that year after year the statement was made that the Corporation had to meet the demands of certain bodies, and that these demands constituted expenditure over which the Corporation had no control, whereas in actual fact the Corporation had control, because their representatives on the Boards of these bodies were in the majority.

Certain aspects of the estimates were discussed, and the deputation emphasised the view held by the Council of the Dublin Chamber that the rates in the city were already too high and that any increase will act as a deterrent on enterprise and have a serious effect on the industry and commerce of the city, eventually leading to an increase in unemployment.

The City Manager has been asked to place these views before the Corporation.

A splendid programme for music-lovers has been arranged. The bill includes such well-known artists as Moira Griffiths, Teresa Owens, Joseph Flood and Paddy Henry. The concert begins at 8.15.

GARDEN SCHEME

JUBILEE NURSES' PENSION FUND

The Garden Scheme in aid of the Jubilee Nurses' Pension Fund has provided a valuable opportunity for the public to see some really beautiful gardens, rare flowers and plants. Since the scheme was started in 1930, 1,236 gardens have been opened, resulting in £16,000, half of which has been credited to the Nurses' Pension Fund and the other half having supplemented the funds of the local District Nursing Associations.

The Garden Scheme has begun its activities for 1940, as will be seen in our advertising columns. The first garden this season was opened last Sunday by the Honourable Mrs. Barry, Ongar, Clonsilla, Co. Dublin. The beautiful gardens at Abbotstown, Castleknock, County Dublin, will be open on Sunday, 20th April, by kind permission of Lord and Lady HolmPatrick. It is hoped that 1940 will be a successful season, notwithstanding the strain and stress of the present time.

DUBLIN CIRCUIT COURT

WOMAN'S RIGHT TO WORK

ACTION AGAINST UNION OFFICIALS

(BEFORE JUDGE DAVITT.)

Pleading that under the Constitution of Ireland a woman had the right to work and to freedom from interference by trade unions, Noreen McClay, The Cottage, Glasamullen, Greystones, Co. Wicklow, sought to recover £250 damages from the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union for the alleged wrongful dismissal of the plaintiff from the post of usherette in the Savoy Cinema, Dublin.

William O'Brien, general secretary of the union, and Frank Robbins, secretary of the Cinema Branch (2) of the union, were named as defendants.

It was revealed during the hearing of the plaintiff's case, which was conducted by Miss McClay, that she had over a period of fourteen months unsuccessfully endeavoured to get a solicitor to act for her and that she had drafted the documents in the case herself.

The plaintiff alleged that the union caused her dismissal by wilful interference, by threats, as instruments of force, to compel the proprietors of Irish Cinema, Ltd., to dismiss her.

The defence was a denial of the use of threats, and it was pleaded that if the defendants were guilty of the acts complained of, such acts were lawfully done in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute.

In evidence, the plaintiff stated that she had been a member of the union for three years and had been a collector of the union contributions for the Savoy staff. During the last six months of her employment she ceased paying union contributions, and, following interviews with the defendant Robbins and a meeting of the staff, she was dismissed. She felt that she had a legal right to leave the union if she wished. Her employment had been on a weekly basis at 85s.

Following an explanation by the judge that the defendants could not be sued as officials of the union, the plaintiff stated that she would proceed against them personally.

The hearing was adjourned till Monday.

Mr. W. O'B. FitzGerald (instructed by Mr. S. Ryan, solicitor) appeared for the defendants.

BRAY DISTRICT COURT

SPORTING RIFLE FINE

(BEFORE MR. L. PRICE.)

John Stokes, Calary, Bray, was fined 10s. for having at Calary on 24th March last a .22 rifle and four .22 cartridges unlawfully in his possession, not being holder of a firearms certificate.

In defence Stokes said that this land at Calary was overrun with rabbits, and he thought he could use his brother's rifle to shoot them; His brother had a licence.

CYCLIST FINED

Richard Huggard, Liscombe House, Adelaide road, Terenure, was fined £3 3s. for driving a motor cycle in a dangerous manner on the Glen of the Downs-Delgany road.

Mr. J. J. Kirwan, solicitor, defended.

OLD BELVEDERE MUSICAL SOCIETY

The Old Belvedere Musical and Dramatic Society, which scored such a signal success with their presentation of "Iolanthe," are producing "The Maid of the Mountains" at the Gaiety Theatre, Dublin, next week, and from what one can gather the performance promises to be on even a higher plane than in their Gilbert and Sullivan work. One of the most popular post-war musical comedies, "The Maid of the Mountains" has not been staged here for some years, so that its revival will be welcomed. There will be an excellent team of principals, with Evelyn Fitzpatrick as the Maid, Teresa, and Maureen Carr as Vittoria. Doreen Riordan will play Angela and Mairin Norman the part of Gianetta. P. J. Donohoe, who was such a success as the Lord Chancellor in "Iolanthe," will be seen in the rôle of Tonio, with John R. Callanan as Beppo, Gerard Byrne as the General and Noel Dunne as Baldasarre.

They will be supported by an excellent chorus and nothing has been left undone to make the production a first-rate affair.

The Old Belvedere and Clontarf Rugby teams, which are taking part in the Leinster Senior Rugby Club final to-day (Saturday), will be present at the opening show on Monday night.

During March 496 people were killed in road accidents in Great Britain, compared with 457 in the same month of 1939. During the black-out there were 235 deaths last month.

MEADOW FOR SPRING CUP

Allure Selected to Win the 1,000 Guineas Trial

SIR ABE BAILEY won the Newbury Spring Cup twelve months ago with Caerloptic, and Meadow has a sound chance of carrying the same colours to victory in the race to-day. Meadow ran well on more than one occasion last season, and was not beaten far out of a place in the Eclipse Stakes. He made his first appearance of the season last week in the Liverpool Spring Cup, and was narrowly deprived of third place by Lover's Fate. That outing should have brought him on a few pounds, and I expect him to turn the tables on Lover's Fate this time.

Halstead won five of her eight races as a three-year-old. She is not harshly treated on her best form, and is likely to figure prominently. Most danger to though, will probably come from Ticca Gari, who showed a return to his best form by finishing third in the Lincolnshire Handicap.

There will not be a large field for the 1,000 Guineas Trial Plate.

ALLURE

is reported to have developed into a nice filly, and she will probably win. She was not hurried last year, and after running unplaced at Windsor in June won her next three races in fluent style.

The most formidable of the opposition is likely to be Thyrse and Silverlace II. Thyrse won one of her six races last season, and finished third in each of the others. Silverlace II. made steady improvement throughout the year, and easily won a maiden race over seven furlongs here in October.

Several of the runners for the Thatcham Long Distance Handicap are fit from hurdling.

BAHUDDIN

is in this category and he appears to be nicely handicapped. Vergilius will be all the better for his race at Hurst Park. He may be placed, but Bahuddin should win.

Gordon Richards may win the Spring Maiden Plate on who has been showing up well in recent work. Folengo, runner-up to Bold Nick at Hurst Park, appears the best of the opposition.

PONT L'EVEQUE,

I hear that

KUELU

has been sharpened up for the Manton Plate. He has improved as a result of his race at Hurst Park and is expected to open his winning account on this occasion.

My principal fancies at Doncaster are

NOBLE GLEN

in the Milton Plate and

MYSTERY MAN

in the Scurry Handicap.

SPORTING GOSSIP

Jockey Changes Stables

J. Hine, the jockey, who used to be with Frank Hartigan, is now attached to V. Hobbs's stable.

Fair Ina Sold

The smart two-year-old, Fair Ina, has been sold by Mrs. Mackean and has joined R. More O'Ferrall's team at Kildangan.

For Export

Kama, 3 years, by Link Boy—Silver Voice, and Lough Dan, 4 years, by Concerto—Toland, have been purchased by the Anglo-Irish Agency, Ltd., of Old Bond street, London, for export abroad.

NEWMARKET HINTS FOR TO-DAY

At Newbury to-day J. Jarvis will saddle for the Spring Maiden Plate, and, even though he is backward, he should do better than our other competitor, Bon Accord.

ROYAL STANDARD

Captain Boyd-Rochfort has sent Ombro and Diadoque to compete for the Newbury Cup. Ombro, who will be carrying the stable confidence, has been specially trained for the race, and I have faith in this strongly-built chestnut carrying off the spoils. Buxton has done wonderfully well of late, but Bombay Bay is not yet at her best, and a similar remark applies to Southport. I do not hesitate to advise the support of OMBRO (nap).

In the 1,000 Guineas Trial Plate

MERRY DEVON

will give a good account of herself, and will not be easily beaten in the Long Distance Handicap.

CONTREVENT

AGNES SOREL

shapes very well in home gallops, and can be recommended each way for the Manton Plate.

Selections for Doncaster—3.0, Solar Queen; 3.30, Beginner; 4.0, Mammee gelding (next best); 4.30, Willow Knight; 5.0, Laureat II.

KNOCKADROLEEN MAY WIN

£150 STEEPLECHASE AT NAVAN

Swindon Lad Fancied for the April Handicap Hurdle

'Buses from Burgh Quay from Noon.

THE splendidly appointed Proudstown Park course beside the town of Navan will to-day be the scene of what promises to be a very enjoyable meeting. Thanks to enterprising management, this County Meath fixture has come on by leaps and bounds in popular favour, and it is tolerably safe to anticipate that substantial public patronage will be forthcoming to-day. Special motor coaches leave Burgh Quay from 12 noon.

Tote Double on Fourth and Sixth Races.

Fields will rule of nice strength in the majority of the events, chief of which is the Tara Plate, a handicap steeplechase of £150, run over a distance of three miles. There is material for an interesting race, in which the brunt of the battle may be borne by Knockadroleen, Ballyhooley and Actup, and, perhaps, the first-named, who ran so well for a long way in the Red Cross 'Chase, won by Jack Chaucer, will prevail. Eleven runners have been declared for the April Hurdle Race, which also provides a capital contest, for the winner of which we rely on Swindon Lad, to whom Walter's Pride may prove the chief danger. Selections:—
Farmers' Plate—Northolt Park.
April Hurdle—Swindon Lad.
Meath Hunt Cup—Ramona II.; if absent, Lismoher.
Dowth Plate—Smerwick's Nephew; if absent, Simple Song.
Tara Plate—Knockadroleen.
Rathnally Plate—Angerton.

POINT-TO-POINT

A FATAL ACCIDENT AT HALVERSTOWN

MR. KEVIN PRENDERGAST SUCCUMBS TO INJURIES

A fatal accident marred the Kildare Hunt Point-to-point at Halverstown, Kilcullen, yesterday. Mr. Kevin Prendergast, who rode Capt. H. de Burgh's Alice Pinkthorne in the Maiden Race, had the mount on Mr. J. D. Maher's Blackwood Cross in the Kildare Hunt Farmers' Light-weight Race. At the first fence the filly came down, threw her rider on to his head and rolled over him. Mr. Prendergast was immediately attended by Surgeon D. J. Cannon, of Kildare, and removed to the Drogheda Memorial Hospital at the Curragh, but on arrival life was extinct. Deceased was a son of Mr. Patrick Prendergast, of Athy, and a brother of "M. C." and "A. P.," the well-known steeplechase riders.

There were plenty of runners and a few excellent finishes, one of the best being in the Punchestown Challenge Cup, for which Patsy Popalong was the popular fancy. He, however, came to grief at the first fence, and for the second successive season victory went to Miss D. Sealy's Nilisagam, who was again ridden by that accomplished horsewoman, Miss Shiela Meyers. Having made all the running, Nilisagam almost extinguished his chance at the final obstacle, but Miss Meyers instantly righted him, and, riding a grand finish, she won by a length and a half from Ketchup, who was always well up with the winner.

Mr. J. Osborne saddled three winners—Mr. X. L., who won the Hunt Sportsman's Race for Lieut.-Colonel Baron de Robeck; Miss H. Ball's Chattis Hill, who had an easy victory in the Maiden Race and the Hon. Mrs. Massey's National Lad, who supplemented a recent success in the adjoining Hunt's race.

HUNTING

NAAS HARRIERS

A large field turned out for the last meet of the season at Abbeylands, Clane. Before moving off all were entertained by Mr. C. O'Neill. Hounds opened up in some rushes just behind the village, and, swinging left around Mr. O'Neill's house, headed for Straffan demesne. Before reaching this, however, they turned left to cross the Clane-Celbridge road, and made straight for Clongowes, where they finished in the laurels beside the College after a fast gallop over excellent country. Hounds next found in the bog below Rathcoffey ruins, made a short circle, and then away at a fast pace to Rathcoffey hill. Leaving the ruins on the right, they continued across the summit of the hill and over the Maynooth road, with Painestown on the left. Short of Baltracey, however, hounds ran into a nest of hares and were called off. This finished a second good hunt, and home was the order. Among those out were:—Major J. V. Lawless, M.H.; Dr. Solomons, Mr. and Mrs. Dermot O'Brien, Mrs. Power, Mr. and Miss Reeves-Smyth, Lieutenant Justin McCarthy (Hon. Secretary), Mr. C. O'Neill, Captains Higgins and Swan, Lieutenants McCormack and O'Reilly, Miss E. Mansfield, Colonel H. Mansfield, Mr. D. W. Ireland, Mr. P. Coonan, Lieutenant T. Banaghan (Hon. Whip), Major Mainguy.

TO-DAY'S CUP FINAL

Forwards v. Backs in Clontarf-Old Belvedere Meeting

THE final of the Leinster Senior Cup will provide an interesting climax to the season, and this afternoon's match at Lansdowne road between Old Belvedere and Clontarf may provide an exceptionally good struggle. Only in comparatively recent years have Clontarf become a power in Leinster Rugby, and they have rather a remarkable record in this competition. Five years ago they won the Cup for the first time in their long history, and during the succeeding three years they reached the final, only to lose to Blackrock College twice and University College once. This will, therefore, be their fifth successive appearance in the last stage, and as they have enjoyed a successful season into the bargain they will have high hopes of success.

On the other hand, Old Belvedere have proved something of a bombshell in the event. They created a big surprise by defeating Blackrock in the second round after a brilliant display of Rugby by both sides; then last Saturday they overcame Wanderers in convincing fashion, this being the first time they have ever succeeded in defeating the latter, and they are certainly on the crest of the wave at the moment.

CONTRASTING STYLES

The styles of the two teams are widely contrasting, Old Belvedere relying mainly on a fast, well-combined back division, whereas Clontarf's strength lies mainly in their forwards, the backs being used almost entirely in defence. The Clontarf forwards are both heavy and fast; no man is outstanding, but everyone does his share, and no Dublin pack has ever gained an advantage over them this season. Behind the scrum they have a young and quite useful pair of halves in O'Hagan and Smith, and F. G. Moran is now a more dangerous wing three-quarter than ever previously in his career, but the policy is not to trust the backs in attack, forward rushes and snap scores being the customary tactics.

One thing is certain, there are no holes in the Clontarf defence. Every man can tackle and check rushes, and this, together with the pack, forms the main power of the team, and makes them most difficult to defeat.

There can be no denying the fact, however, that Old Belvedere have a great chance of winning the trophy for the first time. In the four Quinns they have backs who know every move the others make, and a most inspiring scrum-half and leader in George Morgan, now right at the top of his form. Another strong point is the soundness of Thorpe at full-back. The forwards excelled themselves against Blackrock and Wanderers, and they may be able to hold their own in the loose, but unless they can get a reasonable share of the ball in the tight scrums the attacking value of their backs may be wasted. As Clontarf are such good cup-fighters they will start slight favourites, but it seems certain to be a close and exciting finish.

EAST OF IRELAND CHAMPIONSHIP

CO. LOUTH CLUB ABANDONS THE FIXTURE

We have received the following from the Secretary of the County Louth Golf Club.:—

"At a meeting of the Executive Committee last night (April 11) the following resolution was adopted:

"'That on behalf of the County Louth Golf Club we strongly protest against the harsh and inconsiderate attitude adopted by the Golfing Union of Ireland towards our East of Ireland championship fixture.

"'That, furthermore, in view of the fact that our arrangements were officially notified to the Golfing Union of Ireland over thirteen weeks ago, we consider it utterly unreasonable that, with only three weeks left, a ban should be placed on our fixture in marked contrast to the policy adopted towards other competitions affected, whose dates are comparatively far away.

"'That, acting under duress, and as a mark of protest against what we consider to be unfair treatment, we will cancel the fixture altogether and hold only our normal open week events.

"'That the relevant correspondence regarding this matter be handed to the Press.'"

VITAL LEAGUE MATCHES

TRINITY'S CHANCE OF CHAMPIONSHIP

For all but two clubs—Three Rock Rovers and Corinthians—to-day's matches conclude the Senior League competition. The championship of Section A will be decided if Dublin University defeat Railway Union at Park avenue, or if Naas beat Three Rock Rovers at Naas. If either of these events occur, Trinity will regain the honour they last held three years ago; or if they lose to Railway, and Rovers win at Naas, then the latter will have a chance of snatching the championship next Wednesday, when they play Corinthians for four points.

In their last four engagements, Trinity have secured only two points, drawing with Naas and Corinthians, and losing to Y.M.C.A. and Pembroke Wanderers. Unless they show a considerable improvement, especially in attack, they may suffer another reverse, as Railway are always formidable opponents at Park avenue. Rovers will have no easy task at Naas, but as they are playing confident hockey at present, they should collect both points there. In the remaining game, Pembroke Wanderers, a vastly improved team, may get the better of Y.M.C.A.

ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL

TEST FOR LEAGUE LEADERS

ST. JAMES'S GATE VISIT BOHEMIANS

The League of Ireland Competition is drawing towards its close, but it seems unlikely that the list of matches scheduled for the week-end will bring any marked change in the positions of the teams concerned in the struggle for top place, unless there are a couple of surprises forthcoming. St. James's Gate hold a three points lead of their nearest rivals, Shamrock Rovers, with Dundalk, who have played one match more, two points behind Rovers.

If St. James's Gate defeat Bohemians to-morrow and Shamrock Rovers fail against Shelbourne at Milltown, then the "Gate" will become champions. As both matches bear a very open appearance, it is improbable that the issue will be decided this week-end. To-day's game at Harold's Cross is interesting, in so far as Dundalk require both points to remain in the running for second place. If they are to win they will require more dash in their attack than they have shown of late.

St. James's Gate, at their best, are a sound side, but they occasionally lapse, and they cannot afford to make any mistakes against Bohemians, who, even in the possible absence of Kevin O'Flanagan, possess a lively forward line. Shamrock Rovers should about defeat Shelbourne, but the latter will not readily be beaten. The other matches are of only passing interest. Cork United, at home, should account for Limerick, while Sligo Rovers are unlikely to fall before Waterford, but Bray Unknowns will need to be at their best to hold Drumcondra.

AMATEUR BOXING

TWO RESULTS REVERSED

Browne and Knowles Beat Irish Champions

TWO of the three return fights from the Irish Championships ended with the results reversed, at the Corinthian Club's Tournament, before a big gallery, at The Stadium, last night. Private W. Knowles, who was considered unlucky to lose the fly-weight final to S. Tallon, won on this occasion; O. Browne won a glorious scrap against M. Doyle, the bantam champion, but Corporal P. Dowdall confirmed the previous decision he had won from J. Smith, of Clonmel. The latter was again a disappointment, and seems to have lost the art of attack. Not until the last round of a showy, but poor, contest, did he appear to wake up to the fact that he must attack to have any hope of success, and, by that time, it was too late.

Once again, Browne and Doyle put up a wonderful fight, and, although it was again very close, indeed, Browne deserved the verdict. He fought as he had done in the championships, drawing Doyle's leads and scoring on the retreat with stiff punches to the face; but, in addition, this time, he produced an attacking right swing, which shook even the iron-framed Doyle. After a first round, in which Browne held a margin, he had the Dublin man staggering with a right to the jaw early in the second round, and for a moment it looked like a knock-out.

DOYLE'S STRENGTH

Doyle, however, has amazing powers of recovery, and before the end of the round he was actually attacking again. The third went all in Doyle's favour, for he scored frequently during his attacks, and Browne seemed to be slowing up, but he came back in the fourth and fifth to give as good as he got. In the sixth his right swing found its mark on Doyle's face several times, and, in a whirlwind finish, he just held on to his early lead.

The Knowles-Tallon affair was not a particularly outstanding bout, but it was a tremendously hard one, in which Knowles' unceasing attack gave him a narrow, and, perhaps, rather fortunate victory. His defence is almost non-existent, and he took plenty of punishment while wading in, but he is so strong that Tallon could not keep him out. The latter was the cleverer boxer, but he still lacks fire, and more of that quality would probably have given him the verdict.

That W. Gifford is a worthy Leinster bantam-weight champion was proved by his clever victory over J. McGouran after a very fast bout. For three rounds, McGouran's exceptional quickness to attack gave him a considerable advantage, his right doing punishing work, and he rocked Gifford to the heels with a right to the jaw in the third round. However, Gifford was scoring inside, and he took command from the fourth round onwards. His defence became proof against McGouran's attacks, and his straight left piled him up sufficient points to gain the narrowest possible verdict.

THEATRE ROYAL

A drama of diamond smuggling in Africa, "Adventures in Diamonds," which will open at the Theatre Royal to-morrow, has one of the largest casts of the year, headed by George Brent, John Loder, Nigel Bruce and Elizabeth Patterson. Isa Miranda, who makes her début in an English-speaking production, has been acclaimed as one of the screen's greatest discoveries since Dietrich. In addition to narrating the adventures of the thieves, the story depicts the mining of diamonds. In the large stage presentation are Rudy Starita, the broadcasting star, with his xylophone and vibra harp; Jan Zalski, Europe's tenor, and the Dublin vocalists, Mona Brandon and Eileen Clifford.

Tribute is paid to Victor Herbert, who ruled Broadway during its most colourful era, in Jimmy Campbell's spectacular show, "Melodies of Victor Herbert," which will be presented at the Theatre Royal next week.

GAELIC GAMES

FOOTBALL LEAGUE SEMI-FINALS

HEAVY PROGRAMMES AT DUBLIN VENUES

(By PAT'O.)

Galway and Meath remain favourites for to-morrow's League semi-finals at Galway and Navan respectively. Experience in big games is on their side, but on fast pitches Roscommon and Wexford will run them close, and there is much confidence behind the Roscommon men. Galway city pitch will favour the home side, whilst Meath know every angle at Navan.

University College (Dublin) have two fine sides this season. I think they will win the football comfortably from St. Paul's, and may prove too fast for Eoghan Ruadhs in hurling. Ben Edars, Geraldines and St. Joseph's are other likely winners in a heavy Dublin programme. Civil Service teams should collect four points in their League programme at Coolock and Drumcondra, though Erin's Hopes are useful at home.

FIXTURES

Navan—Meath v. Wexford (Football League), 3.30.
Galway—Galway v. Roscommon (Football League), 3.30.
Longford—Longford v. Offaly (Junior Football), 3.45.
Carlow—Carlow v. Kildare (Junior Football), 3.45.
Enniskillen—Fermanagh v. Cavan (Junior Football), 4.0.
Belfield—U.C.D. v. St. Paul's (Football Championship), 1.0; U.C.D. v. Eoghan Ruadhs (Hurling League), 3.30.
Coolock—Civil Service v. Commercials (Hurling League), 11.45; Ben Edars v. Dolphins (Football Championship), 1.15, Geraldines v. St. Sylvester's (do.), 2.30.
Army Grounds—Faughs v. Kevin's (Hurling Championship), 11.45.
Drumcondra—Civil Service v. Erin's Hopes (Football League), 12.0.
Chapelizod—St. Joseph's v. P. Macken's (Football Championship), 1.15.

THE LIFEBOAT INSTITUTION

ITS WORK IN IRELAND LAST YEAR

Since the outbreak of the war 1,851 seamen's lives had been saved by the lifeboats around the coasts of the British Isles, was stated at the annual meeting of the Dublin City branch of the Royal National Lifeboat Institution in the Shelbourne Hotel, Dublin, yesterday afternoon.

Moving the adoption of the report, which stated that the total income for the year amounted to £1,020, or £13 less than the previous year, the Chairman (Mr. John Good) said that in the year ended September 30 last lifeboats stationed off the coast of Ireland were called out on 48 occasions and succeeded in saving 29 lives. Since the outbreak of the war the calls on lifeboats had increased enormously. A report issued by the Lifeboat Institution stated that 1,851 lives had been saved and that £13,913 had been paid to crews and others for their services. To meet these large calls on the funds additional and increased subscriptions were urgently required. In view of the increased activities of their lifeboats the expenses would be increased very materially.

Having referred to the result of the special effort campaign, including contributions from ships, hotels, shops, schools and colleges, the house-to-house collection and other efforts to raise funds, the Chairman said that the lifeboats around the Irish coast were among the most up-to-date in the service and represented something like £200,000 capital invested in the Institution. Their upkeep cost £12,000 a year, while the crews were paid for their services every time the lifeboats were called out. Subscriptions from all Ireland amounted to about £5,000 a year, or half of what the Institution spent here.

CALL FOR SPECIAL EFFORT

Captain Alan Gordon, chairman of the Dublin Port and Docks Board, seconding, said that shipping, from the points of view of the companies and the seamen, was going through difficult times, and it was of the utmost national importance that their lifeboats should be fit and ready to save lives. They should make a special effort, therefore, to support the Institution.

Mr. R. W. Sinnott supported the resolution, which was adopted.

The Branch and Ladies' Guild officials were re-elected, on the motion of Mr. J. M. Irwin, seconded by Miss H. Robinson.

Major Arthur Whewell proposed a vote of thanks to the Institution's contributors and helpers.

Captain J. H. Webb, Dublin Harbour Master, who seconded, paid a tribute to the work of the women helpers.

A resolution of thanks to the Press for their support also was adopted, on the motion of Mr. R. N. Guinness, seconded by Lady Taylor.

NATIONAL LIFEBOAT BRIDGE DRIVE

The bridge drive organised by Lady Taylor, President City of Dublin Branch Ladies' Lifeboat Guild, will be held in the Shelbourne Hotel on Friday, 26th April. The record of the lifeboat service is one of which all may be proud. During the past seven months 851 lives have been saved—an average of 68 lives a week—for which the institution has paid over £13,900 in rewards to the lifeboat crews. The committee includes:—Mrs. Edgar Anderson, Mrs. David Barry, Mrs. Brittain, Mrs. A. Huet, Mrs. McConnell, Lady Myles, Mrs. Pringle, Miss A. Pemberton and Mrs. Sinott.

Major Llewellyn Howard Lloyd, Commanding Officer of a Royal Artillery unit in Cheshire, was found shot dead in his billet yesterday. A Service revolver lay near-by.

DUBLIN STOCK EXCHANGE

QUIET, WITH SOME FIRM SPOTS

NUMEROUS NOMINAL QUOTATIONS

Trading on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday was again on a very restricted scale, as few operators were willing to open commitments over the week-end in view of the prevailing uncertainty. Consequently leading British Industrials were idle, and made a dull showing in nominal markings. Local issues also continued quiet, although there were one or two firm spots.

Home Government Funds held steady to firm, apart from the Fourth National Loan, which fell 10s. to 94. Four per Cent. Exchequer Bonds recovered 10s. to 103½, and 3¾ per Cent. Financial Agreement Loan advanced 7s. 6d. to 97½.

War Loan hardened to 99, but Dublin 4 per Cent. 1955-60 dipped to 94½. In Banks the recent demand for Provincial New resulted in a sharp rise of 3s. 3d. to 41s. 6d. Nationals shaded off to 41s. 3d.

Guinness Ord. were slightly harder at around 77s. 6d., and Power Deb. repeated 18s. 9d. Rails were idle, and looked mostly sellers in nominal markings.

Alliance Gas Ord. were raised pence to 23s. Cement Ord., Hely's Ord. and Irish Sugar Pref. held their previous levels.

Tobaccos were neglected, but advised dull. B.A.T. Ord. were called 1s. 6d. lower at around 106s., and Imperial Tobaccos fell pence to about 115s. 7½d.

Coats Ord. shaded off to 37s. 7½d., and Courtaulds finished 1s. down at 37s. 9d. Dunlop Rubbers changed hands at 36s. 1½d., and Imperial Chemical Ord. gave way several pence to 31s. 1½d. Vickers Ord. advised easier at 17s. 1½d., and Gold Coast Selection Trust quoted 14s. 10½d.

THE MONEY MARKET

BILL TENDER RESULT

The tenders for £50,000,000 Treasury bills were opened yesterday at the Bank of England. The total amount applied for was £90,575,000, and the average rate per cent. was £1 0s. 8.16d., compared £1 0s. 8.33d. last week. Tenders will be received next week for bills to the value of £50,000,000.

Preparations for next Monday's War Loan payment were reflected in the unwillingness of some of the clearing banks to add further to bill portfolios. Rates, however, were unchanged. The credit situation remained comfortable, with overnight loans readily obtainable in outside quarters at 1 per cent.

Silver regained most of the ground lost on Thursday, spot rising 5/16d. to 20⅞d. per oz. and forward ⅛d. to 20⅞d. per oz. There was a fair general demand.

A large number of the "free" list currencies weakened against sterling, following the overnight improvement in the "free" pound in New York. The pound dropped sharply at the opening of the New York market yesterday to $3.49, but subsequently rallied to $3.51.

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE

DULL, PENDING WAR NEWS

NEW LOAN DEALINGS IN FULLY-PAID FORM

PENDING further news of the war, business on the London Stock markets was reduced to an extremely low point yesterday, and, owing to a general desire to keep commitments to a minimum over the week-end, most sections relinquished the buoyant undertone which appeared on the previous day. The volume of actual liquidation was not large, but, with little inquiry to offset offerings, prices were easily depressed and for the greater part of the session the trend was downward. The principal Gold Mining issues offered resistance to the general dullness and some Oil shares also were well held, but otherwise prices made a poor showing.

GILT-EDGED FEATURE

The feature in the Gilt-edged section was the start of dealing in the new War Loan in its fully-paid form. The quotation was 99⅝. Interest in other issues was negligible and occasional sales met with little opposition. War Loan 3½ p.c. finished 1/16 off at 98⅞ and Conversion 3½ p.c. shed ¼ to 97⅞. Dominion and Colonial issues also moved unfavourably, and in the case of certain New Zealand Loans sharp losses were recorded.

Foreign Bonds were still in the background and end-week sales provided the bulk of transactions. Brazilian Bonds made a poor start and became progressively weaker, to close with falls ranging up to 1½, by which amount the 5 p.c. Funding of 1914 reacted to 31. Far Eastern descriptions managed to preserve a steady appearance and Europeans showed little movement.

SHARP FALLS IN RAILS

Renewed talk of wages demands created a feeling of uncertainty in the British Rail section and from the outset quotations were inclined to drop back. Scattered selling emphasised the decline in later dealing and consequently final losses were rather severe. Great Western Ord. and L.M.S. Ord. both fell ¾, the former to 47¾ and the latter to 22⅝. The prior charges suffered equally under the lead of L.N.E. 4 p.c. 1st Pref., which closed 1½ off at 50. Other Rails groups remained extremely quiet.

Industrials were unable to oppose the common trend, but few issues developed any real weakness. Kaffirs were fairly steady throughout the day.

INDUSTRIALS, OILS AND RUBBERS

PRICES SAG THROUGH LACK OF SUPPORT

Operators in the Industrial Market showed a disposition to keep commitments at a minimum over the week-end, and consequently prices generally were inclined to sag owing to lack of fresh support. Business remained on a small scale throughout, and movements were small in most sections.

Iron, Coal and Steel shares moved within narrow limits, and few changes of importance occurred. Hadfields, Clarke Chapman and Richardsons Westgarth were all a trifle harder, the last-named in anticipation of the annual results. Conversely, Whitehead Iron receded to 3½, Settle Speakman to 30s., Colvilles to 22s. 9d., Staveley to 50s. 3d., and United Steels to 22s. 7½d. Vickers at 17s. 1½d. were 1½d. easier.

Electrical Equipments ruled quietly steady, but the Supply shares continued uncertain, and Aircrafts were dull.

Apart from Charringtons, which improved to 55s., Breweries had an easier appearance. Guinness repeated 78s. 3d. The Tobacco leaders were inclined to droop, noticeably "Imps," which finished 1/16 down, while "Bats" lost 1/16. Rayons and Textiles turned easier after a firm start. Courtaulds gave way to 38s. 3d., British Celanese to 8s. 3d., and Bradford Dyers to 5s. 9d.

DUNLOPS RELAPSE

In other directions, Murex, British Ropes, Radiations, Turner and Newall, and Wall Paper Deferred found a few supporters, but Borax Deferred, British Aluminium, Imperial Chemicals, and Dunlops were subject to scattered realisations, the last-named closing with a loss of 1s. at 35s. 9d.

The volume of transactions in Oil shares was again extremely small, and the market failed to maintain the firmer tendency which developed on Thursday. At the start there was an almost general lowering of quotations, and it was only in a few cases that prices made any recovery from the opening levels. Anglo-Iranians met with a little support and rallied, as did Apex and Trinidad Leaseholds. Otherwise a dull tendency prevailed to the close. Mexican Eagles at 6s. 4½d. were 3d. lower, while Canadians lost the turn to 8s. British Controlled Preferences were a trifle harder, but lower prices ruled for Anglo-Ecuadorians and Kern Oils.

Business in the Rubber Share market yesterday was, if anything, on an even smaller scale than formerly, and the tone of the market was steady. Apart from Anglo-Dutch, which shed a few pence, all the leading issues were maintained. In the raw rubber market, spot closed unchanged at 11d. per lb.

HOW GOLD SHARES MOVED

BUSINESS AND INTEREST DIMINISHES

Business and interest fell away perceptibly in all sections of the Mining market yesterday. It could not be said that any weakness developed—indeed, selling was always negligible,—but, in view of the probability of the development of important events over the week-end, dealers, quite understandably, were generally in no mood to increase their commitments.

On the whole, the considerable advance in Kaffirs on Thursday was comfortably maintained. One or two of the "heavies" finally relapsed fractionally, Sub Nigel being ⅛ lower at 13 11/16 and Crowns the same fraction at 13¾. Firm spots were Geldenhuis and Rose Deep. "Johnnies" picked up fractionally, and most of the other finance issues were quietly firm.

Developing mines fluctuated narrowly in quieter trading, and West Africans occasionally closed lower.

Interest in Diamond issues dwindled appreciably, Anglo-Trusts and De Beers Deferred were allowed to sag further to 23s. 6d. and 7⅞ respectively. There was little happening in the Base Metal groups to arouse interest. There were no material changes in the Tin list. Rhodesian Coppers were off colour under scattered week-end sales. Rhokanas reacted 1/16 to 10¼, and smaller declines took place in other shares. Closing prices:—

Boys from the West of England public and secondary schools are to work side by side with farm labourers this summer bringing in the harvest. This is to be their own National Service; for they will not be paid, and will even be expected to pay their railway fare to the farm to which they are allocated. The West of England Voluntary Harvesters' Association, newly formed at Bristol, is organising the scheme.

LOWER PRICES ON WALL STREET

STOCKS CLOSED EASY

From Reuter's Correspondent.
NEW YORK, Friday.

Early sentiment was more cheerful, based on the apparent British success in Scandinavia, but with decisive information regarding the Norwegian conflict lacking the market subsequently moved anything to 2 points lower. Meanwhile the opinion is held that the European uncertainties constitute the chief stumbling block to the spring upturn in business.

Of the 801 stocks traded in the turnover of 830,000 shares, 180 were higher and 418 were lower.

The market finished around the day's low levels and mostly fractions to a point lower. The close was easy.

Sterling exchange opened 6¼ points lower at $3.49⅜, but improved to $3.50⅞ during the morning. The rate further advanced in the afternoon to $3.51⅞, but finally reacted and closed 6⅝ points down at $3.49⅜. Silver was unchanged at 34¾c.

TWO SOLICIT[ORS] STRUCK O[FF]

STERN COMM[ENTS] BY CHIEF JUS[TICE]

HIGH STANDARD [MUST] BE MAINTAIN[ED]

THE Chief Justice yesterday [...] the names of James A. Keo[hane ...] res, County Galway, and L[...] Downes, Carrick-on-Shannon, Co[...] be struck off the Roll of Solicito[rs ...] ing been found guilty of profess[ional miscon]duct by the committee appointe[d ...] Solicitors (Ireland) Act, 1898.

The complaints against them [...] before the Chief Justice by Mr. [...] K.C. (instructed by Mr. W. G. [...]) behalf of the Incorporated La[w Society of] Ireland.

In the case of Mr. Keohane, [...] Dermody, Blackwater, Gort, Cou[nty ...] had, it appeared, employed him [...] fessional capacity in connection [...] and with an American estate, s[...] mittee found that he retained a s[...] —now stated to be £77 odd—[...] belonging to Mrs. Dermody.

Mr. Phelps recalled that the [...] been before the Chief Justice la[st ...] and last month, and that the C[...] had directed certain inquiries [...] As the result of the taxation of M[r. ...] bill of costs against Mrs. Dermod[y ...] he said, a sum of £77 odd foun[d ...] by Mr. Keohane to Mrs. Dermo[dy ...] money had been retained by M[r. ...] since November, 1938, without [...] Keohane had had every opport[unity ...] the money, and the committee ask[ed ...] Justice to deal most rigorously [...] with this case, because they tho[ught ...] was a scandal that this man shoul[d ...] to remain on the Roll.

Mr. T. J. Conolly (instructed [...] cent Shields), who appeared for M[r. ...] said that he had understood tha[t ...] due would be paid, and he had n[o in]structions in the matter.

"VERY SERIOUS C[ASE]"

The Chief Justice said that th[is ...] serious case. When the committ[ee ...] report to him, it appeared on th[e ...] that £175 had been handed o[ver ...] Keohane, £100 of it apparently [...] paid to him in order that he mig[ht ...] to recover for Mrs. Dermody so[...] the estate of a man named Cusa[ck ...] died in America, and the balanc[e ...] having been given to him for s[...] That happened in the autumn of [...] Keohane had admitted at the he[aring ...] the committee that he had don[e ...] the matter of the Cusack estate; [...] made some inquiries from a s[...] viously employed by Mrs. Dermo[dy ...] that there was no likelihood o[f ...] money coming from it for her, [...] ingly had done nothing whate[ver ...] matter, in respect of which he [...] £100 in his possession.

In the summer of 1939, continu[...] Justice, Mrs. Dermody appeare[d ...] committee, she having failed t[o ...] payment of this money, and M[r. ...] alleged that he had a claim for [...] Mrs. Dermody which justified hi[m ...] ing the money. The matter had [...] the list before him, and before t[...] ing before him a sum of £75 ha[d ...] leaving £100 still in Mr. Keohan[e's ...]

It had been suggested by M[r. ...] counsel, said the Chief Justic[e ...] Keohane's bill of costs might i[n ...] justify the detention of this [...] accordingly he had directed that [...] costs should be taxed. The bill [...] had amounted to over £92, and [...] taxed to £22 odd, leaving a bala[nce ...] ing unpaid in the hands of the re[...] over £77.

The balance due had not bee[n ...] the Chief Justice, nor, so far [...] see, was there any reasonable c[...] it ever would be paid.

The professional misconduct [...] had been observed the Chief [...] particularly cruel character, [...] it had resulted in the defraudi[ng ...] widow of a sum of over £77, [...] not possibly hold that a solicit[or ...] been guilty of that conduct wa[s ...] remain on the roll of solicitors, [...] from the members of which a h[igh standard] of conduct was expected and ex[...] standard must be rigorously e[nforced ...] he saw no alternative open to [...] direct that Mr. Keohane's name [...] the roll.

The Chief Justice directed that [...] should pay the cost of the he[aring ...] the committee of the Incorp[orated Law] Society of Ireland and £5 5s., [...] taxation.

TWO SOLICITORS STRUCK OFF

STERN COMMENTS BY CHIEF JUSTICE

HIGH STANDARD MUST BE MAINTAINED

THE Chief Justice yesterday directed that the names of James A. Keohane, Loughrea, County Galway, and Leonard E. M. Downes, Carrick-on-Shannon, County Leitrim, be struck off the Roll of Solicitors, both having been found guilty of professional misconduct by the committee appointed under the Solicitors (Ireland) Act, 1898.

The complaints against them were brought before the Chief Justice by Mr. E. J. Phelps, K.C. (instructed by Mr. W. G. Wakely) on behalf of the Incorporated Law Society of Ireland.

In the case of Mr. Keohane, Mrs. Bridget Dermody, Blackwater, Gort, County Galway, had, it appeared, employed him in his professional capacity in connection with lands and with an American estate, and the committee found that he retained a sum of money —now stated to be £77 odd—unjustifiably, belonging to Mrs. Dermody.

Mr. Phelps recalled that the matter had been before the Chief Justice last December and last month, and that the Chief Justice had directed certain inquiries to be made. As the result of the taxation of Mr. Keohane's bill of costs against Mrs. Dermody, there was, he said, a sum of £77 odd found to be due by Mr. Keohane to Mrs. Dermody, and that money had been retained by Mr. Keohane since November, 1938, without excuse. Mr. Keohane had had every opportunity to pay the money, and the committee asked the Chief Justice to deal most rigorously and severely with this case, because they thought that it was a scandal that this man should be allowed to remain on the Roll.

Mr. T. J. Conolly (instructed by Mr. Vincent Shields), who appeared for Mr. Keohane, said that he had understood that the money due would be paid, and he had no further instructions in the matter.

"VERY SERIOUS CASE"

The Chief Justice said that this was a very serious case. When the committee sent their report to him, it appeared on the face of it that £175 had been handed over to Mr. Keohane, £100 of it apparently having been paid to him in order that he might endeavour to recover for Mrs. Dermody some share in the estate of a man named Cusack, who had died in America, and the balance apparently having been given to him for safe keeping. That happened in the autumn of 1938. Mr. Keohane had admitted at the hearing before the committee that he had done nothing in the matter of the Cusack estate; that he had made some inquiries from a solicitor previously employed by Mrs. Dermody and found that there was no likelihood of any more money coming from it for her, and accordingly had done nothing whatever in the matter, in respect of which he had retained £100 in his possession.

In the summer of 1939, continued the Chief Justice, Mrs. Dermody appeared before the committee, she having failed to get some payment of this money, and Mr. Keohane alleged that he had a claim for costs against Mrs. Dermody which justified him in retaining the money. The matter had been put in the list before him, and before the first hearing before him a sum of £75 had been paid, leaving £100 still in Mr. Keohane's hands.

It had been suggested by Mr. Keohane's counsel, said the Chief Justice, that Mr. Keohane's bill of costs might in some way justify the detention of this money, and accordingly he had directed that the bill of costs should be taxed. The bill, as drawn, had amounted to over £92, and it had been taxed to £22 odd, leaving a balance remaining unpaid in the hands of the respondent of over £77.

The balance due had not been paid, said the Chief Justice, nor, so far as he could see, was there any reasonable certainty that it ever would be paid.

The professional misconduct in this case had been, observed the Chief Justice, of a particularly cruel character, inasmuch as it had resulted in the defrauding of a poor widow of a sum of over £77, and he could not possibly hold that a solicitor who had been guilty of that conduct was worthy to remain on the roll of solicitors, a profession from the members of which a high standard of conduct was expected and exacted. That standard must be rigorously enforced, and he saw no alternative open to him but to direct that Mr. Keohane's name be struck off the roll.

The Chief Justice directed that Mr Keohane should pay the cost of the hearing before the committee of the Incorporated Law Society of Ireland and £5 5s., the costs of taxation.

CHEQUE TRANSACTION

The complaint against Mr. Downes had been made by Mr. Aubrey E. O'Callaghan, assistant general manager of the Irish National Assurance Co., Ltd., Dublin, and related to a cheque which had been sent by the Insurance Co. to Mr. Downes for the purpose of settling a claim in respect of a motor car accident. Mr. Downes, it appeared, had sent his own cheque for £56 14s. 4d. to the solicitor for the plaintiff in the proceedings, and the cheque had been twice returned, marked "refer to drawer." The solicitor wrote to the Insurance Co. for the payment of the £56 14s. 4d., and the company, having paid the money to the solicitor, applied to Mr. Downes for a refund.

The committee reported that Mr. Downes had made no payment to the Insurance Co. in respect of the money due to them by him in regard to the transaction.

Mr. Phelps said that this matter had been before the Chief Justice last month and had been adjourned, an undertaking having been given on behalf of Mr. Downes that the money would be paid. No money had been paid, and he had been instructed that the Incorporated Law Society looked on this case with the same gravity as on the previous case.

There was no appearance on behalf of Mr. Downes.

The Chief Justice said that when this case was last before him he had been told that the money would be paid at once. The money had not been paid, nor had there been any attempt to pay it, and he was afraid that he could not draw a distinction between that case and the preceding case. He would make a similar order.

Mr. Proud, solicitor (Messrs. Little, O hUadhaigh and Proud), who appeared for the Insurance Co., said that the company did not ask for costs against Mr. Downes.

The Chief Justice did not make any order in regard to costs.

BOOKMAKER'S ACTION

(BEFORE THE MASTER OF THE HIGH COURT.)

A summons brought by Jack McFarland, bookmaker, Ballybough road, Dublin, against William Ronaldson, farmer, Claremount, Mullingar, claiming £135, the balance alleged to be due by the defendant for wagers on horse races, was dismissed with costs.

Mr. Patrick F. O'Reilly, solicitor, for Mr. McFarland, stated that Mr. Ronaldson made an affidavit, in which he said that the sum sued for was in respect of wagers between Mr. McFarland and himself on horse races. It was, therefore, not recoverable, and he asked that the summons be dismissed.

Mr. W. Callan (instructed by Messrs. Ross and Co.) appeared for Mr. Ronaldson.

CLAIM FAILS

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE HANNA AND A JURY.)

Patrick McConnell, stonecutter, Collins avenue, Drumcondra, Dublin, claimed damages against Lawrence Carpenter, Normanstown, Carlanstown, Ceannanus Mor, Co. Meath, for injuries suffered when he was struck by a motor car driven by the defendant when he was cycling at Navan road, Castleknock, Co. Dublin, on 17th March last. Judgment was given for the defendant with costs.

The defence was a denial of negligence, and a plea of contributory negligence.

Mr. P. J. Roe, K.C., and Mr. P. Bourke (instructed by Mr. P. C. Moore) appeared for Mr McConnell; and Mr. J. A. Costello, K.C., Mr. R. McGonigal, K.C., and Mr. Art O'Connor (instructed by Mr. N. Lacy) for Mr. Carpenter.

COMPENSATION FOR INJURIES

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE MARTIN MAGUIRE.)

Settlements in the following actions were announced:—

Elizabeth Haide (5 years), Connolly street, Kilkenny (suing by her parents, James Haide, serving with the National Army, and Mary Haide, Connolly street, Kilkenny), v. Kieran Carroll, Bonnettstown, Kilkenny. On May 23, 1939, Elizabeth Haide was struck by Mr. Carroll's motor car and injured. She is to receive £150 and a sum for costs.

Mr. P. J. McEnery, K.C., and Mr. John L. Esmonde (instructed by Mr. F. J. Clohosey) appeared for Elizabeth Haide; and Mr. T. J. Kirwan was solicitor for Mr. Carroll.

Mrs. Catherine Geraghty, Kickham road, Inchicore, Dublin, v. Dublin United Tramways Company, Ltd. Plaintiff claimed damages under the Fatal Accidents Act on her own behalf and on behalf of other relatives of Elizabeth Maguire (20), her daughter, who had been employed at Messrs. Jacob's biscuit factory, and who was killed on November 16, 1938, when her bicycle and an omnibus, owned by the defendants, came into collision near the Coombe. She is to receive £100 and a sum for costs.

Mr. C. O'Daly (instructed by Captain Peadar Cowan) appeared for Mrs. Geraghty; and Mr. Sean Ryan, solicitor, of Messrs. James O'Connor and Co., was for the defendants.

Hugh Creevy, car-park attendant, Stafford street, Dublin, v. Dublin United Tramways Company, Ltd. Plaintiff, who suffered injuries on November 4th, 1939, when he was struck by a motor omnibus owned by the defendants at the junction of Parliament street and Wellington quay, Dublin, is to receive £25 and costs.

Mr. Patrick D. O'Grady was solicitor for Mr. Creevy, and Mr. Sean Ryan, of Messrs. James O'Connor and Co., was solicitor for the Tramways Company.

Mrs. Kathleen Reardon, Larkhill road, Whitehall, Dublin, v. Dublin United Tramways Company, Ltd. Mrs. Reardon, who suffered injuries on July 7, 1939, when she was thrown down while a passenger in a 'bus owned by the defendants, is to receive £75 and a sum for costs.

Mr. Michael Dunne was solicitor for Mrs. Reardon; and Mr. Sean Ryan, solicitor, of Messrs. James O'Connor and Co., appeared for the Tramways Company.

JUDGMENT FOR RENT

An application was made on behalf of Messrs. Sharman, Crawford and Co., wholesale wine merchants, Middle Abbey street, Dublin, for final judgment for £108, being three quarters' rent claimed to be due and payable in respect of stores at the rear of 25 Bachelor's Walk, Dublin, occupied by Messrs. Norstrom Brothers, wholesale furniture manufacturers, and held under a tenancy from year to year.

It was submitted on behalf of Messrs. Norstrom Brothers that portion of the premises had been taken from them and that they had been given alternative accommodation, and that ejectment proceedings were pending in the Circuit Court in respect of the alternative accommodation.

Mr. Justice Maguire gave judgment for the amount claimed with costs.

Mr. J. A. McCarthy, K.C., and Miss Deverell (instructed by Mr. C. B. W. Boyle) appeared for the plaintiffs, and Mr. T. A. Doyle (instructed by Mr. J. G. Allen) appeared for the defendants.

PROBATE ACTION SETTLED

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE HANNA.)

A settlement on terms which were not disclosed was announced in an action brought by Mrs. Sabina Roland, 42 Summerhill Parade, Dublin, to have revoked a grant of probate of the will, dated November 22, 1932, of her brother, James J. Hutchinson, late of 308 Clontarf road, Dublin, who died unmarried, aged 63, on December 12, 1937. Mrs. Roland had further sought a grant of administration of her brother's personal estate.

Mr. Hutchinson was stated to have been chief analytical chemist in Messrs. Jacob's biscuit factory, Dublin, and to have left assets value about £1,100.

The action was brought against Mrs. Annie M. Doyle and Thomas F. Doyle, chemist's assistant, of 308 Clontarf road, executors of the will, to whom the grant of probate had been issued.

Mr. Justice Hanna decreed probate of the will in solemn form and received the consent to settlement.

With Mr. Costello, K.C., for the executors, was Mr. P. McGilligan (instructed by Messrs. P. M. Seales and Son); and Mr. K. Dixon, K.C., and Mr. J. J. Devlin (instructed by Mr. Brendan P. McCormack) were for Mrs. Roland.

DUBLIN CIRCUIT (CRIMINAL) COURT

YOUTHS SENTENCED

(BEFORE JUDGE SHANNON AND A JURY.)

Patrick Walsh (25), Thomas O'Donnell (21), Patrick Kelly (19), of Summer place, and William McMahon (20), Great Charles street, were sentenced each to four months' imprisonment for the theft of a quantity of lead and other property from a store at the rear of Mountjoy place, to the value of £71, the property of Charles Ward.

Mr. Walter Moloney (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor) prosecuted, and Mr. F. Connolly (Mr. L. Trant McCarthy's Office) appeared for McMahon.

STABBED FOUR MEN

Richard Scott, Clonliffe avenue, labourer, was sentenced to nine months' imprisonment with hard labour for stabbing four persons at a St. John Ambulance Brigade smoking concert in the Red Bank Restaurant, on February 17th, and also for assaulting Guard McManus.

The Judge said that Scott went to the function with a knife, strapped around his body. There could only be one answer to conduct of that kind.

YOUTH ACQUITTED

William Kelly (16½), 10 Ranelagh, was acquitted on a charge of taking possession by force of a handbag, the property of Mrs. Helena Henderson, of Dartmouth square, on January 29th.

Mrs. Henderson, who described the snatching incident by a young man, said that her bag was returned to her later. Everything was intact with the exception of some loose silver, and possibly a ten-shilling note.

Mr. M. O'Donnell (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor) prosecuted, and Mr. F. Connolly defended.

FRESH EGGS ALL THE YEAR ROUND

Messrs. F. A. Wyatt and Co., Ltd., have this season put on the market an egg preservative, under the registered name of "Eggo," which has been tested by many people with great success. "Eggo" is an amber-coloured substance, and is applied with the hands to the eggs, a thin coating being sufficient, in the same way as is done in "buttering" eggs, with the great advantage, this simple process preserves them, combining, as it does, harmlessly with the egg shells, forming an air and waterproof coating that ensures the absolute freshness of the eggs for many months.

"Eggo" is retailed at 1/6 per jar, being sufficient to preserve from 250 to 300 eggs—a cost which works out at about 1d. per dozen, and certainly constitutes a remarkable saving to the housewife, who thus can buy her winter supply of eggs when they are plentiful and cheap. "Eggo" itself keeps for years, is odourless, tasteless, and harmless either to hands or skin.

IRISH WILLS

Major-General Sidney Selden Long, C.B., Maidenhead, Berks, who died on January 31 last, aged 78 years, son of the late Commissary-General J. Long, J.P., of Manor House, Dundrum, Co. Dublin, left £15,141.

Mrs. Nannie Power O'Donoghue, of Standard Hotel, Harcourt street, Dublin, who died on January 12 last, left estate in Eire and England valued at £3,[illegible].
